CHAPTER 12.—SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

INTRODUCTION

The statistics of school attendance obtained in the census of 1930 are based upon the answer to a question on the Population Schedule as to whether the person enumerated had attended school or college at any time between September 1, 1929, and the census date, April 1, 1930. If the person had attended any kind of school, college, or other educational institution at any time within the period in question, an affirmative answer was to be made. The total number of persons returned as attending school is therefore larger than the number who were in attendance at any one time between September 1, 1929, and April 1, 1930.

In 1920 the question was asked in practically the same form, though since the census date was January 1 (instead of April 1) the period covered was somewhat less and the returns may have been somewhat smaller than they would have been if the inquiry had been made in April. It is believed, however, that the difference is very small and that the figures for 1930 are fairly comparable with those for 1920 and for the earlier censuses, except possibly those of 1890 and 1900. At these two censuses the enumerators were required to ascertain not only the fact of school attendance, but also the number of months of attendance. In some instances the person from whom the enumerator obtained his information would not know the number of months of school attendance, even though he knew the child had attended school. In a few of these cases the enumerator, since he could not make a complete report, probably made no report at all with respect to school attendance. The returns for 1890 and 1900 are therefore doubtless less nearly complete than those for the subsequent censuses and perhaps less nearly complete than those for the earlier censuses. In the censuses prior to 1890, and also in 1910, as well as 1920, the general form of the inquiry on school attendance was the same as in 1930.

Statistics on school attendance for continental United States are presented in this chapter by States and for cities of 25,000 or more. Less detailed statistics are presented for counties and for incorporated places of 10,000 or more in Volume III of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population; and statistics for the outlying territories and possessions enumerated at the Fifteenth Census are presented in the Report on Outlying Territories and Possessions.

School attendance by age.—The ages of compulsory school attendance vary from State to State, beginning at 6 years in 2 States, 7 years in 29 States and the District of Columbia, and at 8 years in 17 States. The main body of pupils attending the elementary schools (grades 1 to 8) are included in the group 7 to 13 years of age, for which statistics are presented in somewhat more detail in the accompanying tables than for the other age groups. Very significant changes have taken place, however, in the percentage of school attendance in those higher age groups representing pupils in secondary schools. The school attendance figures are summarized by single years of age from 5 to 20 in Table 1.

Color and nativity.—The differences in the proportion attending school as between one and another of the color and nativity classes for which census statistics are presented are due in part to the extent to which these classes are found in urban and rural communities—or on farms and elsewhere. The foreign-born white and the native white of foreign or mixed parentage are found largely in urban communities, in which school attendance begins, and in general ends, at somewhat earlier ages than in rural communities. The native white of native parentage and the Negro population, on the other hand, are found more largely in the rural areas.

The United States totals for school attendance are presented by color and nativity in Table 2.

Urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm population.—Because of the marked differences between urban and rural communities in regard to school facilities and also in the composition of their population, statistics for school attendance are presented for these three population groups in several of the tables.

Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. In three of the New England States, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, towns (townships) are classified as urban if they have a population of 2,500 or more and certain urban characteristics; and a few large and densely populated townships in other States are likewise classified, even though not formally incorporated as municipalities.

In addition to the classification of the population as urban and rural, the rural population is further subdivided into rural-farm and rural-nonfarm, on the basis of the replies to a question reading "Does this family live on a farm?" The rural-farm population includes all persons living on farms in the rural areas. The rural-nonfarm or "village" population is made up largely of persons living in small towns or villages, both incorporated and unincorporated, though in many areas there are considerable numbers of families living in the open country but not on farms.

The school-attendance figures for these urban and rural areas are summarized in Table 3.

Gainful employment and school attendance.—For persons from 10 to 24 years of age a tabulation of school attendance in combination with occupational status has been made; that is, the school attendance data have been tabulated separately for persons returned as gainfully occupied and for those not gainfully occupied. One of the main objects of this tabulation is to show the number of young persons past the compulsory school attendance age who are neither attending school nor engaged in a gainful occupation. The total number of persons 19 years of age in this group, for example, is made up rather largely of young men and young women seeking their first jobs. The data are especially significant, therefore, in connection with the statistics of unemployment. In the tabulations for females separate figures are presented for those married and for those not married, since a young married woman could hardly be counted as a probable first-job seeker, even though she were not attending school. Another significant figure is that representing the number of persons both following a gainful occupation and attending school.

The results of this special tabulation are presented in detail, by age, in Tables 29 to 34.

[1] Mexicans classified separately for the first time in 1930; included for the most part with whites of foreign birth or parentage in 1920 and 1910.

[2] All figures for 1890 are based upon population and school attendance for the age group 5 to 19 instead of 5 to 20, as the number of persons 20 years old attending school is not available. It is estimated that the percentage attending school for all classes would be reduced from 54.3 to 52.0 if figures for age 20 could be included.

TABLE 7.—SCHOOL ATTENDANCE OF THE POPULATION 7 TO 20 YEARS OLD, BY COLOR, NATIVITY, AGE, AND SEX, FOR THE UNITED STATES: 1930, 1920, AND 1910

[Some part of the increase from 1920 to 1930 in the percentages at school, shown by whites of foreign birth or parentage, is doubtless due to the separate classification in 1930 of Mexicans who were included for the most part with these two white classes in 1920 and 1910]
