1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

July 27, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-B, No. 15

POPULATION OF KANSAS: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Kansas on April 1, 1950, was 1,905,299, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 104,271, or 5.8 percent, over the 1,801,028 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Kansas ranked thirty-first in population in 1950. The 1950 population of Kansas was nearly 18 times as large as the population of that part of the Territory of Kansas comprising the present State when it was first covered in a Federal census in 1860.

According to the new urban definition, Kansas had 993,220 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 912,079 in rural territory. The urban population constituted 52.1 percent of the total population of the State. The trend in the urban and rural population can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On that basis, the urban population gained 149,527, or 19.8 percent, between 1940 and 1950. The rural population, on the other hand, declined by 45,256, or 4.3 percent. The rural population has declined in all but one decade of the twentieth century.

Between 1940 and 1950, 36 of the counties in Kansas gained population and 69 lost population. Included in the 36 counties with increases were 12 of the 16 which had gained in the period 1930 to 1940. The most rapid rate of growth--138.3 percent--was recorded in Grant County, whereas the largest numerical increase--78,979--was experienced in Sedgwick County. The counties in Kansas range in size from Greeley with a population of 2,010 to Sedgwick with a population of 222,290.

Kansas had 601 incorporated places with a combined population of 1,206,252 and 2 unincorporated places with a combined population of 5,032. There were 903,468 persons living in the 68 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. The only unincorporated place of more than 2,500 inhabitants, Sunflower, had a population of 3,834. The incorporated places ranged in size from Freeport city with a population of 30 to Wichita city with a population of 163,279.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are also urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new definition, the 1950 urban population of Kansas included (1) the 903,468 inhabitants of the 68 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, (2) the 3,834 inhabitants of Sunflower, an unincorporated place, and (3) the 85,918 inhabitants of the 9 incorporated places under 2,500 inhabitants and of the unincorporated territory included in the urban fringes of Topeka and Wichita and those parts of the urban fringes of Kansas City, Mo., and St. Joseph, Mo., which are located in Kansas. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Kansas in 1940, the first element comprises the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--89,752--represents the gain in the urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

POPULATION OF KENTUCKY: APRIL 1, 1950

The total population of Kentucky on April 1, 1950, was 2,944,806, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 99,179, or 3.5 percent, over the 2,845,627 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Kentucky ranked nineteenth in population. The 1950 population of Kentucky was about 40 times as large as the 1790 population of that part of Virginia which became the State of Kentucky in 1792.

Kentucky has always been a State with the preponderance of its population living in rural territory. In 1950, according to the new urban definition, Kentucky had 1,084,070 persons living in urban territory and 1,860,736 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 36.8 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 42 of the 120 counties in Kentucky increased in population. The most rapid rate of growth was experienced in Hardin County, which gained at the rate of 72.8 percent. The largest numerical increase was recorded in Jefferson County, which had a gain of 99,223. The counties in Kentucky ranged in size from Robertson with a population of 2,881 to Jefferson with a population of 484,615.

There were 333 places in Kentucky incorporated as cities or towns in 1950 and 37 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 1,194,107 persons living in the incorporated places, 208,368 of whom were in the 265 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 74,352 persons in the unincorporated places, 43,203 were in the 31 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Caseyville town with a population of 73 to Louisville city with a population of 369,129.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, urban territory has been defined to comprise (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. All other territory is classified as rural. According to the definition used in previous censuses, urban territory was designated as all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Kentucky consisted of: (1) The 985,739 inhabitants of the 68 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 31,149 inhabitants of the 6 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 67,182 persons living in other territory in the Kentucky parts of the urban-fringe areas of Huntington (W. Va.)--Ashland (Ky.); Cincinnati, Ohio; and Louisville, Ky. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Kentucky according to the old urban definition, the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--98,331--represents the gain in the urban population of Kentucky which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATION

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

September 12, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 17

POPULATION OF LOUISIANA: APRIL 1, 1950

The total population of Louisiana on April 1, 1950, was 2,683,516, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 319,636, or 13.5 percent, over the 2,363,880 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Louisiana ranked twenty-first in population. The 1950 population was more than 17 times as large as its population in 1820 when it was first enumerated as a State.

According to the new urban definition, Louisiana had 1,471,696 persons living in urban territory and 1,211,820 persons in rural territory. The urban population amounted to 54.8 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 34 of the 64 parishes in Louisiana gained population and 30 lost population. Almost two-thirds of the population increase in the State was accounted for by Orleans, East Baton Rouge, and Jefferson Parishes. East Baton Rouge and Jefferson Parishes also experienced the greatest rates of increase, 79.0 and 106.0 percent, respectively. The parishes of Louisiana ranged in size from Cameron with a population of 6,244 to Orleans with a population of 570,445.

In 1950 Louisiana had a total of 224 incorporated places and 26 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The incorporated places ranged in size from Mound village with a population of 105 to New Orleans city with a population of 570,445. There were 1,513,237 persons living in the incorporated places, 149,448 of whom were in the 158 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 57,016 persons in the unincorporated places, 30,567 were living in the 20 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, urban territory has been defined to comprise (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. All other territory is classified as rural. According to the definition used in previous censuses, urban territory was designated as all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Louisiana included the following components: (1) The 1,363,789 inhabitants of the 66 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 26,449 inhabitants of the 6 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; and (3) the 81,458 persons living in unincorporated territory included in the urban-fringe areas of Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and Shreveport. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Louisiana according to the old definition, the population of the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--107,907--represents the gain in the urban population of Louisiana which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

April 10, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 18

POPULATION OF MAINE: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is the fourth of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Maine on April 1, 1950, was 913,774, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 66,548, or 7.9 percent, over the 847,226 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. In 1950, Maine ranked 35th among the States in population. The present population of Maine is almost $9\frac{1}{2}$ times as large as its population 160 years ago when it was first enumerated in a Federal census.

In 1950, according to the new urban definition, Maine had a larger urban than rural population, with an urban population of 472,000 and a rural population of 441,774. The urban population comprised 51.7 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 14 of the 16 counties in Maine gained population and 2 lost population. Cumberland, York, and Penobscot Counties, the counties having the greatest rates of increase, amounting to 15.9, 13.3, and 11.4 percent, respectively, had more than half of their population in urban territory. The two counties which lost population, Washington and Hancock, had declines of 6.8 and 1.0 percent, respectively. The counties in Maine ranged in size from Lincoln with a population of 18,004 to Cumberland with a population of 169,201.

Maine had a total of 21 incorporated and 73 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Portland, the largest city in the State, had a population of 77,634. The population living in incorporated and unincorporated places amounted to 537,328, or 58.8 percent of the total population of the State. All of the incorporated places and 29 of the unincorporated places had 2,500 inhabitants or more. There were 350,426 persons living in the 21 incorporated places, 119,859 in the 29 unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, and 67,043 in the 44 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The population of all places of 2,500 or more amounted to 470,285, or 51.5 percent of the total population of the State.

For the 1950 Census, urban territory has been defined to comprise (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. All other territory is classified as rural.

In order to apply the new definition, the Bureau of the Census has delineated boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Only those with a population of 2,500 or more have been defined as urban. The Bureau has also delineated arbitrary boundaries for the thickly settled fringe around cities of 50,000 or more.

According to the old definition, urban territory comprised all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Maine included the following components: (1) The 350,426 inhabitants of the 21 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 24,081 inhabitants of the 5 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which were also urban under special rule according to the old definition; (3) the 95,778 inhabitants of the 24 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which were not urban under special rule in 1940, and (4) the 1,715 persons living in unincorporated territory in the urban fringe of Portland. Since the first two elements comprise the urban population under the old urban definition, the aggregate population of the remaining elements--97,493--represents the net gain in urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

FOR RELEASE

Series PC-8, No. 19

POPULATION OF MARYLAND: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Maryland on April 1, 1950, was 2,343,001, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 521,757, or 28.6 percent, over the 1,821,244 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Maryland ranked twenty-fourth in population. The 1950 population was more than seven times as large as its population in 1790 when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Maryland had 1,615,902 persons living in urban territory and 727,099 in rural territory. The urban population accounted for 69.0 percent of the total population of the State.

There are 23 counties and 1 independent city--Baltimore--in Maryland. Between 1940 and 1950, 20 of the counties and Baltimore city increased in population. The rates of change for the counties ranged from a decline of 3.3 percent for Garrett County to an increase of 117.0 percent for Prince Georges County. The largest numerical increase was experienced in Baltimore County, which had a gain of 114,448. Nearly three-fourths of the increase in the population of the State was accounted for by Baltimore, Prince Georges, and Montgomery Counties and Baltimore city. The counties in Maryland ranged in size from Calvert with a population of 12,100 to Baltimore with a population of 270,273.

In 1950 there were 149 places incorporated as cities, towns, and villages in Maryland and 15 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 1,310,869 persons living in the incorporated places, 95,611 of whom were in the 118 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 28,762 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 20,804 were in the 13 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Highland Beach town with a population of 5 to Baltimore city with a population of 949,708.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, urban territory has been defined to comprise (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. All other territory is classified as rural. According to the definition used in previous censuses, urban territory was designated as all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places.

Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Maryland consisted of the following components: (1) The 1,215,258 inhabitants of the 31 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 7,958 inhabitants of the 2 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 392,686 persons living in other territory in the urban fringe of Baltimore and the Maryland part of the urban fringe of Washington, D. C.

Under the old definition, there were two places urban under special rule in Maryland. These places, district 12 and district 13 in Baltimore County, had a total population of 59,360. The urban population under the old definition, therefore, consisted of the population of the 31 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 59,360 inhabitants of district 12 and district 13, a total of 1,274,618.

Under the new definition 56,469 inhabitants of the two places urban under special rule were included in the urban population because they were living in the urban fringe of Baltimore. The remaining 2,891 inhabitants of these places were classified as rural. The net gain in the urban population of the State resulting from the change in definition, therefore, was 341,284.

ADVANCE REPORTS

September 30, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 20

POPULATION OF MASSACHUSETTS: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Massachusetts on April 1, 1950, was 4,690,514, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 373,793, or 8.7 percent, over the 4,316,721 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Massachusetts ranked ninth in population. The 1950 population was more than 12 times as large as its population in 1790 when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Massachusetts had 3,959,239 persons living in urban territory and 731,275 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 84.4 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 13 of the 14 counties in Massachusetts increased in population. The rates of increase ranged from 2.4 percent for Nantucket to 25.5 percent for Barnstable. The rate of loss for Dukes was 0.6 percent. The largest numerical increase was recorded in Middlesex, which had a gain of 93,179. The counties in Massachusetts ranged in size from Nantucket with a population of 3,484 to Middlesex with a population of 1,064,569.

There were 39 places in Massachusetts in 1950 incorporated as cities and 114 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. All of the cities had 2,500 inhabitants or more. The 69 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 104,758 of the 364,613 persons living in unincorporated places. The cities in Massachusetts ranged in size from Newburyport with a population of 14,111 to Boston with a population of 801,444.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Massachusetts consisted of the following components: (1) The 3,034,825 inhabitants of the 39 cities of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 259,855 inhabitants of the 45 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) 664,559 persons living in the urban-fringe areas of Boston, Brockton, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford, Springfield, Holyoke, Worcester, and the Massachusetts parts of the urban-fringe areas of Fall River and Providence, R. I. There were 83 towns urban under special rule in Massachusetts according to the old urban definition. The 1950 urban population under the old definition, therefore, consisted of the 3,034,825 inhabitants of the 39 cities and the 1,087,313 inhabitants of the 83 places urban under special rule. According to the new urban definition, 621,646 of the inhabitants of the places urban under special rule were classified as urban because of residence in urban-fringe areas and 228,642 because of residence in 35 unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. The remaining 237,025 persons were included in the rural population. On the other hand, included in the urban population according to the new definition were 42,913 persons living in urban-fringe areas and 31,213 persons living in 10 additional unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more who were classified as rural under the old definition. The net loss in the urban population of Massachusetts which resulted from the change in definition, therefore, is 162,899.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 7, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 21

POPULATION OF MICHIGAN: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Michigan on April 1, 1950, was 6,371,766, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 1,115,660, or 21.2 percent, over the 5,256,106 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Michigan ranked seventh in population. The 1950 population was 30 times as large as its population in 1840 when it was first enumerated as a State.

In 1950, according to the new urban definition, Michigan had an urban population of 4,503,084 and a rural population of 1,868,682. The urban population comprised 70.7 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 69 of the 83 counties in Michigan gained in population. Wayne County, which had an increase of 419,612, accounted for more than one-third of the population increase in the State. The most rapid rate of increase was experienced in Macomb County, which increased at the rate of 71.8 percent. The counties in Michigan ranged in size from Keweenaw with a population of 2,918 to Wayne with a population of 2,435,235.

Michigan had a total of 486 places incorporated as cities or villages and 48 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Of the 4,421,154 persons living in the incorporated places, 322,147 were living in the 347 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The 37 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 55,152 of the 114,042 inhabitants of the unincorporated places. The incorporated places ranged in size from Lake Ann village with a population of 99 to Detroit city with a population of 1,849,568.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Michigan included the following components: (1) The 4,099,007 inhabitants of the 139 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 58,890 inhabitants of the 11 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; and (3) 345,187 persons living in other territory included in the urban-fringe areas of Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Muskegon, Pontiac, and Saginaw and the Michigan part of the urban fringe of South Bend, Ind. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Michigan according to the old definition, the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--404,077--represents the gain in the urban population of Michigan which resulted from the change in definition.

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

September 4, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 22

POPULATION OF MINNESOTA: APRIL 1, 1950

The total population of Minnesota on April 1, 1950, was 2,982,483, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 190,183, or 6.8 percent, over the 2,792,300 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Minnesota ranked eighteenth in population. The 1950 population of Minnesota was about 17 times as large as the population in 1860, the first year in which Minnesota was enumerated as a State in a Federal census.

According to the new urban definition Minnesota had 1,624,914 persons living in urban territory and 1,357,569 in rural territory. The urban population accounted for 54.5 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 38 of the 87 counties in Minnesota increased in population, 48 lost population, and 1 had no change in population. More than four-fifths of the increase for the State was accounted for by Hennepin and Ramsey, the most populous counties in the State, which had gains of 107,680 and 45,397, respectively. The counties in Minnesota ranged in size from Cook with a population of 2,900 to Hennepin with a population of 676,579.

In 1950 there were 782 incorporated places (cities, villages, and one borough) in Minnesota. There were 2,017,720 persons living in the incorporated places, 410,274 of whom were in the 691 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Valley Acres, the one unincorporated place of 1,000 inhabitants or more delineated by the Bureau of the Census in Minnesota, had a population of 1,727. The incorporated places ranged in size from Island View village with a population of 18 to Minneapolis city with a population of 521,718.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Minnesota consisted of the 1,607,446 persons in the 91 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 17,468 persons living outside incorporated urban places in the urban-fringe areas of Minneapolis-St. Paul and Duluth. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Minnesota according to the old definition, the population of the first element constituted the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining element--17,468--represents the gain in the urban population of Minnesota which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

September 27, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 23

POPULATION OF MISSISSIPPI: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Mississippi on April 1, 1950, was 2,178,914, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State declined by 4,882, or 0.2 percent, from the 2,183,796 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Mississippi ranked twenty-sixth in population. The 1950 population was nearly 29 times as large as the population in 1820 when Mississippi was first enumerated as a State.

According to the new urban definition, Mississippi had 607,162 persons living in urban territory and 1,571,752 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 27.9 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 23 of the 82 counties in Mississippi increased in population. The largest numerical increases were recorded in Hinds and Harrison Counties, which had gains of 34,891 and 33,274, respectively. The most rapid rate of increase was experienced in Harrison County, which had an increase of 65.5 percent. The counties in Mississippi ranged in size from Issaquena with a population of 4,966 to Hinds with a population of 142,164.

In 1950 there were 278 places in Mississippi incorporated as cities, towns, or villages and 9 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The 225 incorporated places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 175,732 of the 777,504 inhabitants living in incorporated places. Of the 15,964 persons living in unincorporated places, 12,564 were in the eight places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Blodgett town with a population of 5 to Jackson city with a population of 98,271.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Mississippi consisted of the following components: (1) The 601,772 inhabitants of the 53 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 3,400 inhabitants of Mississippi City-Handsboro, the only specially delineated unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more in the State; and (3) 1,990 persons living in unincorporated territory included in the urban fringe of Jackson. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Mississippi according to the old definition, the population of the incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--5,390--represents the gain in the urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 3, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 22

POPULATION OF MISSOURI: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Missouri on April 1, 1950, was 3,954,658, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 169,989, or 4.5 percent, over the 3,784,664 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Missouri ranked eleventh in population. The 1950 population was 28 times as large as the population in 1830, the first year in which Missouri was enumerated as a State.

According to the new urban definition, Missouri had 2,432,715 persons living in urban territory and 1,521,938 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 61.5 percent of the population of the State.

There are 114 counties and one independent city--St. Louis--in Missouri. Between 1940 and 1950, 24 of the counties and St. Louis city increased in population. The rates of increase ranged from 0.5 percent for Jasper County to 48.7 percent for Clay County. The largest numerical increase was experienced in St. Louis County, which had an increase of 132,119. The counties in Missouri ranged in size from Carter with a population of 4,777 to Jackson with a population of 541,035.

In 1950 there were 854 places in Missouri incorporated as cities or towns and 2 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The 746 incorporated places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 397,160 of the 2,687,309 persons living in incorporated places. Herculaneum and Leadwood, the two unincorporated places, had 1,603 and 1,479 inhabitants, respectively. The incorporated places ranged in size from Altona town with a population of 13 to St. Louis city with a population of 856,796.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

As there were no unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more in the State, the urban population of Missouri according to the new urban definition consisted of the 2,290,149 inhabitants of the 108 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and 142,566 persons living in other territory in the urban fringe of Springfield and the Missouri parts of the urban-fringe areas of Kansas City, St. Joseph, and St. Louis. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Missouri in 1940, the urban population under the old definition consisted of the inhabitants of the 108 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. The gain in the urban population of Missouri which resulted from the change in definition, therefore, is 142,566.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATION

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

August 16, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 25

POPULATION OF MONTANA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Montana on April 1, 1950, was 591,024, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 31,568, or 5.6 percent, over the 559,456 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, Montana ranked forty-third in population. The 1950 population of Montana was about 29 times as large as its population in 1870 when it was first enumerated separately in a Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Montana had 258,034 persons living in urban territory and 332,990 persons in rural territory. The urban population amounted to 43.7 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 21 of the 56 counties in Montana gained population. More than four-fifths of the increase in the State was accounted for by Yellowstone and Cascade, the most populous counties in the State, which had increases of 14,693 and 11,028, respectively. Yellowstone also had the most rapid rate of growth, 35.7 percent. The counties in Montana ranged in size from Petroleum with a population of 1,026 to Yellowstone National Park, part of which is located in Montana, is independent of county organization.

There were 120 places in Montana incorporated as cities and towns and 10 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 331,274 persons living in the incorporated places, 78,368 of whom were living in the 95 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. There were 20,266 persons in the unincorporated places, 15,138 of whom were living in the nine places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Bearcreek town with a population of 162 to Great Falls city with a population of 39,214.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

There were no urban-fringe areas in Montana. According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Montana, therefore, included the 252,906 inhabitants of the 25 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 5,128 inhabitants of the one specially delineated unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more, Silver Bow Park-Floral Park. Since there were no places urban under special rule according to the old definition, the population of the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining element--5,128--represents the gain in the urban population of Montana which resulted from the change in definition.

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

August 12, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 26

POPULATION OF NEBRASKA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Nebraska on April 1, 1950, was 1,325,510, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 9,676, or 0.7 percent, over the 1,315,834 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Nebraska ranked thirty-third in population. The 1950 population of Nebraska was about 46 times as large as its population in 1860 when the Territory of Nebraska was first separately enumerated in a Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Nebraska had 621,905 persons living in urban territory and 703,605 persons in rural territory. The urban population amounted to 46.9 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 19 of the 93 counties in Nebraska gained population. Douglas County, the largest county in the State, had the largest numerical increase, whereas the most rapid rate of growth was experienced in Sarpy County. The counties in Nebraska ranged in size from Arthur with a population of 803 to Douglas with a population of 281,020.

There were 534 places in Nebraska incorporated as cities and villages and 3 unincorporated places. There were 856,680 persons living in the incorporated places, 250,150 of whom were in the 494 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. There were 5,941 persons in the unincorporated places, 3,224 of whom were in the two places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Nenzel village with a population of 24 to Omaha city with a population of 251,117.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Nebraska included the following components: (1) The 606,530 inhabitants of the 40 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 2,717 inhabitants of Huskerville, the 1 specially delineated unincorporated place of 2,500 or more; and (3) the 12,658 persons living in the 1 incorporated place with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants and in unincorporated territory in the urban fringe of Lincoln and the Nebraska parts of the urban fringes of Omaha and Sioux City, Iowa. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Nebraska according to the old definition, the population of the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--15,375--represents the gain in the urban population of Nebraska which resulted from the change in definition.

ADVANCE REPORTS

March 10, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 27

POPULATION OF NEVADA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is the third of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Nevada on April 1, 1950, was 160,083, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the past 10 years, the population of the State increased by 49,836, or 45.2 percent, over the 110,247 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. In 1950, Nevada had the smallest population of all the States. However, the present population of Nevada is more than 23 times as large as its population 90 years ago when it was first enumerated in a Federal census.

In 1950, for the first time, Nevada had a larger urban than rural population, with an urban population of 91,625 and a rural population of 68,458. The urban population comprised 57.2 percent of the total number of inhabitants of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 9 of Nevada's 17 counties gained population and 8 lost population. Of those which gained, Clark and Mineral Counties more than doubled their population. Of the counties which lost population, all except White Pine County had no urban population. Clark, Washoe, Ormsby, and Humboldt Counties, the only counties in the State with more than half their population living in urban territory, had population increases amounting to 194.2, 54.6, 30.0, and 2.0 percent, respectively. The counties of Nevada ranged in size from Esmeralda with a population of 614 to Washoe with a population of 50,205.

Nevada had a total of 15 incorporated places and 9 unincorporated places of 1,000 or more ranging in size from Wells town with a population of 947 to Reno city with a population of 32,497. The population living in incorporated and unincorporated places amounted to 71.3 percent of the total population of the State. Ten places in Nevada had 2,500 inhabitants or more and an aggregate population of 91,625; the remaining 14 places were smaller than 2,500 and had a combined population of 22,502. The 15 incorporated places alone contained 94,221 inhabitants, or 58.9 percent of the total population of the State. Of these 15 places, 8 had 2,500 inhabitants or more and a combined population of 84,079. Nevada had two unincorporated places of 2,500 or more and seven of from 1,000 to 2,500. The population in the unincorporated places of 2,500 or more was 7,546, and the combined population of the smaller unincorporated places was 12,360.

To permit a more realistic classification of the population by urban and rural residence, the Bureau of the Census adopted a new urban definition for use in the 1950 Census. According to this definition, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, incorporated or unincorporated, around cities of 50,000 or more; (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside of any urban fringe; and (d) incorporated towns of 2,500 inhabitants or more except in New England, New York, and Wisconsin, where "towns" are simply minor civil divisions of counties. The remaining population is classified as rural.

According to the old definition, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and in areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In order to apply the new urban definition, the Bureau of the Census has defined boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Only those with a population of 2,500 or more have been defined as urban. The Bureau has also delineated arbitrary boundaries for the thickly settled fringe around cities of 50,000 or more.

There were no urban fringe areas in Nevada, and there were no places urban under special rule according to the old definition. The distribution of the population by urban and rural residence under the new and old definitions differed, therefore, in that the new definition included in the urban population the 7,546 persons living in the 2 unincorporated places of 2,500 or more, who under the old definition would have constituted part of the rural population.

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

April 24, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 28

POPULATION OF NEW HAMPSHIRE: APRIL 1, 1950

The total population of New Hampshire on April 1, 1950, was 533,242, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 41,718, or 8.5 percent over the 491,524 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, New Hampshire ranked forty-fifth in population. The present population of New Hampshire is almost 4 times as large as its population 160 years ago when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, New Hampshire had 306,806 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 226,436 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 57.5 percent of the total population of the State. The trend in the proportion of the State population that was urban can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On that basis, the proportion urban reached a peak in 1930 and declined slightly in the two following decades.

Between 1940 and 1950, all but 1 of the 10 counties in New Hampshire gained population. Hillsborough, the largest county in the State, had the largest numerical increase; but the most rapid rates of growth were experienced in Rockingham and Strafford Counties, which had increases of 20.5 and 18.4 percent, respectively. In Coös County, the county which lost population, the rate of decline was 8.5 percent. The counties in New Hampshire ranged in size from Carroll with a population of 15,868 to Hillsborough with a population of 156,987.

New Hampshire had a total of 12 incorporated places, all of which had 2,500 inhabitants or more, and 45 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The largest of all these places, Manchester city, had a population of 82,732. The 12 incorporated places contained 267,157 inhabitants, or 50.1 percent of the population of the State. Of the 45 unincorporated places in the State, 9 had 2,500 inhabitants or more and a total population of 37,463. There were 304,620 persons living in the 21 places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and 53,377 persons living in the 36 smaller unincorporated places.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, urban territory has been defined to comprise (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. All other territory is classified as rural. According to the definition used in previous censuses, urban territory was designated as all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new definition, the 1950 urban population of New Hampshire included the following components: (1) The 267,157 inhabitants of the 12 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 24,710 inhabitants of the 6 unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more delineated within towns which were entirely urban under special rule in 1940; (3) the 12,753 inhabitants of the other 3 unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; and (4) the 2,186 persons living in the unincorporated territory in the urban fringe of Manchester. Under the old definition, the urban population would have included the inhabitants of the 12 incorporated places of 2,500 or more and the 34,092 inhabitants of the 6 towns urban under special rule in 1940. The 1950 definition classified as urban the 14,939 inhabitants of components 3 and 4 who under the old definition would have been included in the rural population. On the other hand, it included in the rural population the 9,382 persons living in the parts of the 6 towns urban under special rule in 1940 outside the unincorporated places of 2,500 or more. The net effect is a gain of 5,557 in the urban population under the new definition.

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

September 26, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 29

POPULATION OF NEW JERSEY: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of New Jersey on April 1, 1950, was 4,835,329, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 675,164, or 16.2 percent, over the 4,160,165 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, New Jersey ranked eighth in population. The 1950 population was more than 26 times as large as the population in 1790 when New Jersey was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, New Jersey had 4,186,207 persons living in urban territory and 649,122 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 86.6 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 20 of the 21 counties in New Jersey increased in population. The rates of change ranged from a decline of 0.7 percent for Hudson to an increase of 50.2 percent for Ocean. Nearly one-fifth of the population gain for the State was accounted for by Bergen County, which had a numerical increase of 129,493. Three other counties--Essex, Monmouth, and Union--had numerical increases in excess of 50,000. The counties in New Jersey ranged in size from Sussex with a population of 34,423 to Essex with a population of 905,949.

There were 332 places in New Jersey in 1950 incorporated as cities, towns, boroughs, or villages and 45 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The 138 incorporated places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 165,489 of the 3,713,606 inhabitants of the incorporated places. Of the 121,448 persons living in the unincorporated places, 46,516 were in the 30 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places in New Jersey ranged in size from Island Beach borough with a population of 13 to Newark city with a population of 438,776.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places or 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of New Jersey consisted of the following components: (1) The 3,548,117 inhabitants of the 194 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 74,932 inhabitants of the 15 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) 563,158 persons living in other territory in the urban fringe of Atlantic City and the New Jersey parts of the urban-fringe areas of New York-Northeastern New Jersey, Trenton, and Philadelphia, Pa. Under the old urban definition, there were 12 townships urban under special rule in New Jersey. The urban population according to the old urban definition consisted of the 3,548,117 inhabitants of the 194 incorporated places of 2,500 or more and the 299,654 persons living in the 12 townships urban under special rule. Of the inhabitants of the places urban under special rule, 279,335 were classified as urban under the new definition because of residence in urban-fringe areas and 11,286 because of residence in an unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more. The remaining 9,033 persons were classified as rural. On the other hand, the 63,646 inhabitants in the other unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and 283,823 of the persons in other territory in the urban-fringe areas were included in the rural population under the old definition. The net gain in the urban population of New Jersey which resulted from the change in definition, therefore, is 338,436.

POPULATION OF NEW MEXICO: APRIL 1, 1950

The total population of New Mexico on April 1, 1950, was 681,187, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 149,369, or 28.1 percent, over the 531,818 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, New Mexico ranked fortieth in population. The 1950 population of New Mexico was more than seven times as large as the population of the Territory of New Mexico in 1870, the first year for which the population of the area of the present State is available.

According to the new urban definition, New Mexico had 341,889 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 339,298 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 50.2 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 17 of the 32 counties in New Mexico gained population and 14 lost population. The remaining county--Los Alamos--was formed from parts of Sandoval and Santa Fe Counties in 1949. More than one-half the gain of the State was accounted for by Bernalillo County, which led in both the amount and rate of increase. The counties of New Mexico ranged in size from Harding with a population of 3,013 to Bernalillo with a population of 145,673. In 1950 New Mexico had 72 places incorporated as cities, towns, or villages, and 16 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Of the 362,044 inhabitants of the incorporated places, 47,408 were living in the 48 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. There were 43,809 persons living in the unincorporated places, 16,556 of whom were in the 11 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Grenville village with a population of 102 to Albuquerque city with a population of 96,815.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of New Mexico included the 314,636 persons of the 24 incorporated places with 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 27,253 persons of the 5 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more. Since there were no places urban under special rule in New Mexico according to the old urban definition, the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the second element--27,253--represents the gain in the urban population of New Mexico which resulted from the change in definition.
