POPULATION OF NEW YORK: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available).

The total population of New York on April 1, 1950, was 14,830,192, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 1,351,050, or 10.0 percent, over the 13,479,142 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, New York ranked first in population. The 1950 population was more than 43 times as large as the population in 1790, when New York was enumerated in the first Federal census.

In 1950, according to the new urban definition, New York had an urban population of 12,682,446 and a rural population of 2,147,746. The urban population comprised 85.5 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, all but 3 of the 62 counties in New York increased in population. One-fifth of the population gain for the State was accounted for by Nassau County, which led in both the amount and rate of increase with a gain of 266,017, or 65.4 percent. The gain of 436,962 for the five counties constituting New York City (Bronx, Kings, New York, Queens, and Richmond) represented one-third of the population gain for the State. The counties in New York ranged in size from Hamilton with a population of 4,105 to Kings with a population of 2,738,175.

New York had a total of 611 incorporated places and 69 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Of the 12,258,947 persons living in the incorporated places, 404,356 were living in the 399 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 166,442 persons living in the unincorporated places, 71,995 were living in the 51 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Dering Harbor village with a population of 4 to New York City, which had a population of 7,891,957, or more than one-half of the population of the State.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of New York included the following components: (1) The 11,854,591 inhabitants of the 212 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 94,447 inhabitants of the 18 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; and (3) the 733,408 persons living in other territory in the urban-fringe areas of Albany-Troy, Binghamton, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Rochester, Schenectady, Syracuse, and Utica and the New York part of the urban fringe of New York-Northeastern New Jersey. According to the old definition, New York had one place--Irondequoit town--urban under special rule. The first element and the 34,417 persons living in Irondequoit town comprised the urban population under the old definition. Of the persons living in Irondequoit town, 29,692 were classified as urban according to the new definition because they were living in the urban fringe of Rochester. The remaining 4,725 persons were classified as living in rural territory. The net gain in the urban population of New York resulting from the change in definition, therefore, was 793,438.

POPULATION OF NORTH CAROLINA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of North Carolina on April 1, 1950, was 4,061,929, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 490,306, or 13.7 percent, over the 3,571,623 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, North Carolina ranked tenth in population. The 1950 population of North Carolina was more than 10 times as large as its population 160 years ago when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

North Carolina has always been a State with the preponderance of its population living in rural territory. According to the new urban definition, North Carolina had 1,368,101 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 2,693,828 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 33.7 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 78 of the 100 counties in North Carolina gained population and 22 lost population. Of those that lost, 20 had no urban population. Fifteen of the counties increased at a rate in excess of 20 percent. The most rapid rate of growth, 134.4 percent, took place in Onslow County, whereas the largest numerical gain, 45,226, occurred in Mecklenburg County. The counties in North Carolina ranged in size from Tyrrell with a population of 5,048 to Mecklenburg with a population of 197,052.

North Carolina had a total of 475 incorporated places in which 1,529,617 persons were living, and 48 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more in which 143,160 persons were living. These places ranged in size from Dellview town with a population of 7 to Charlotte city with a population of 134,042.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of North Carolina included the following components: (1) The 1,238,193 inhabitants of the 88 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 98,773 inhabitants of the 19 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; (3) the 31,135 persons living in the 1 incorporated place under 2,500 and the unincorporated territory in the urban fringes of Asheville, Charlotte, Durham, Greensboro, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem. Since the first element comprises the urban population under the old definition, the aggregate population of the remaining elements--129,908--represents the gain in the urban population of North Carolina which resulted from the change in definition.

POPULATION OF NORTH DAKOTA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of North Dakota on April 1, 1950, was 619,636, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State decreased by 22,299, or 3.5 percent, from the 641,935 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, North Dakota ranked forty-second in population. The population in 1950 was about 258 times as large as in 1870, the earliest year for which figures for the area constituting the State are available.

North Dakota has always had the major portion of its population living in rural territory. During the past two decades, however, the rural population has declined, whereas the urban population has been increasing steadily. The 1950 urban population of North Dakota amounted to 164,817, an increase of 24.9 percent over the 131,923 urban in 1940. However, the urban population in 1950 comprised only 26.6 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 42 of North Dakota's 53 counties lost population and 11 gained population. The county registering the greatest percentage gain in population, McLean, with a gain of 17.1 percent, had no urban population. Grand Forks, Burleigh, and Cass, the only other counties having gains of more than 10 percent, 14.3, 12.9, and 11.4, respectively, were predominantly urban. The counties of North Dakota ranged in size from Billings with a population of 1,777 to Cass with a population of 58,877.

North Dakota had a total of 346 incorporated places ranging in size from Wabek village with a population of 15 to Fargo city with a population of 38,256. The population living in incorporated places amounted to 324,210, or 52.3 percent of the total population of the State. Thirteen places in North Dakota had 2,500 inhabitants or more and an aggregate population of 164,817. The remaining 333 places were smaller than 2,500 and had a combined population of 159,393. Only 47 of these smaller places had a population greater than 1,000.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All of the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

Since there were no urban-fringe areas in North Dakota, no unincorporated places, and no places urban under special rule according to the old definition, the distribution of the population of North Dakota by urban and rural residence is the same according to either definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATION

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 4, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 34

POPULATION OF OHIO: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Ohio on April 1, 1950, was 7,946,827, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 1,039,015, or 15.0 percent, over the 6,907,612 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Ohio ranked fifth in population. The 1950 population was more than 34 times as large as the population in 1810 when Ohio was first enumerated as a State.

According to the new urban definition, Ohio had 5,578,274 persons living in urban territory and 2,368,353 persons in rural territory. The urban population comprised 70.2 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 70 of the 88 counties in Ohio increased in population. The most rapid rate of increase--64.2 percent--was recorded for Greene County. Cuyahoga led the counties in the amount of gain with an increase of 172,282. The combined gain of Cuyahoga County and the three other counties which had numerical increases of 100,000 or more--Franklin, Hamilton, and Montgomery--accounted for nearly one-half of the population gain for the State. The counties in Ohio ranged in size from Vinton with a population of 10,759 to Cuyahoga with a population of 1,389,532.

In 1950 there were 900 places in Ohio incorporated as cities and villages and 27 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The 686 incorporated places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants accounted for 532,815 of the 5,806,021 persons living in incorporated places. Of the 51,637 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 36,615 were in the 22 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Yankee Lake village with a population of 53 to Cleveland city with a population of 914,808.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Ohio consisted of the following components: (1) The 5,273,206 inhabitants of the 214 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 15,022 inhabitants of the 5 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) 290,046 persons living in other territory in the urban-fringe areas of Akron, Canton, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Hamilton, Springfield, Toledo, and Youngstown and the Ohio parts of the urban-fringe areas of Cincinnati, Huntington (W. Va.)--Ashland (Ky.), and Wheeling, W. Va. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Ohio according to the old urban definition, the population of the first element constituted the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--305,068--represents the gain in the urban population of Ohio which resulted from the change in definition.

POPULATION OF OKLAHOMA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Oklahoma on April 1, 1950, was 2,233,351, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State declined by 103,083, or 4.4 percent from the 2,336,434 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Oklahoma ranked twenty-fifth in population. The 1950 population of Oklahoma was about $8\frac{1}{2}$ times as large as the 1890 population of the area constituting substantially the present area of the State.

According to the new urban definition Oklahoma had 1,139,481 persons living in urban territory and 1,093,870 in rural territory. The urban population accounted for 51.0 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, only 11 of the 77 counties in the State increased in population. The rates of increase ranged from 3.8 percent in Kay County to 49.5 percent in Cleveland County. Oklahoma and Tulsa, the most populous counties in the State, had numerical increases of 81,193 and 58,323, respectively. The counties in Oklahoma ranged in size from Cimarron with a population of 4,589 to Oklahoma with a population of 325,352.

In 1950 there were 525 places in Oklahoma incorporated as cities or towns and 3 unincorporated places of 1,000 or more. There were 1,366,844 persons living in the incorporated places, 259,592 of whom were living in the 440 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 5,655 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 2,300 were in the two places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Santa Fe city with a population of 8 to Oklahoma City with a population of 243,504.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Oklahoma consisted of the following components: (1) The 1,107,252 inhabitants of the 85 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 3,355 inhabitants of Veterans Village, the 1 specially delineated unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 28,874 persons living in the urban fringes of Oklahoma City and Tulsa and the Oklahoma part of the urban fringe of Fort Smith, Ark., in territory outside of incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Oklahoma according to the old definition, the population of the first element constituted the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--32,229--represents the gain in the urban population of Oklahoma which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 19, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 35 Rev.

Original copy precedes this copy

POPULATION OF OKLAHOMA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available. Star (*) denotes revision)

The total population of Oklahoma on April 1, 1950, was 2,333,351, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State declined by 103,033, or 4.4 percent from the 2,336,434 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Oklahoma ranked twenty-fifth in population. The 1950 population of Oklahoma was about $8\frac{1}{2}$ times as large as the 1890 population of the area constituting substantially the present area of the State.

According to the new urban definition Oklahoma had 1,139,481 persons living in urban territory and 1,093,870 in rural territory. The urban population accounted for 51.0 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, only 11 of the 77 counties in the State increased in population. The rates of increase ranged from 3.8 percent in Kay County to 49.5 percent in Cleveland County. Oklahoma and Tulsa, the most populous counties in the State, had numerical increases of 81,193 and 58,323, respectively. The counties in Oklahoma ranged in size from Cimarron with a population of 4,589 to Oklahoma with a population of 325,352.

In 1950 there were 526* places in Oklahoma incorporated as cities or towns and 3 unincorporated places of 1,000 or more. There were 1,367,617* persons living in the incorporated places, 260,365* of whom were living in the 441* places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 5,655 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 2,300 were in the two places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Santa Fe city with a population of 8 to Oklahoma City with a population of 243,504.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Oklahoma consisted of the following components: (1) The 1,107,252 inhabitants of the 85 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 3,355 inhabitants of Veterans Village, the 1 specially delineated unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 28,874 persons living in the urban fringes of Oklahoma City and Tulsa and the Oklahoma part of the urban fringe of Fort Smith, Ark., in territory outside of incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Oklahoma according to the old definition, the population of the first element constituted the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--32,229--represents the gain in the urban population of Oklahoma which resulted from the change in definition.

POPULATION OF OREGON: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Oregon on April 1, 1950, was 1,521,341, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 431,657, or 39.6 percent, over the 1,089,684 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Oregon ranked thirty-second in population. The 1950 population of Oregon was 29 times as large as its population in 1860 when it was first enumerated as a State in a Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Oregon had 819,318 persons living in urban territory and 702,023 living in rural territory. The urban population amounted to 53.9 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 32 of the 36 counties in Oregon increased in population. Twelve of the counties which gained population had rates of increase in excess of 50 percent. Jefferson and Douglas more than doubled in population between 1940 and 1950. More than one-fourth of the population gain for the State was concentrated in Multnomah County, which increased by 116,438. The counties in Oregon ranged in size from Sherman with a population of 2,271 to Multnomah with a population of 471,537.

There were 219 places in Oregon incorporated as cities or towns and 9 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 858,447 persons living in the incorporated places, 126,200 of whom were in the 172 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 24,054 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 11,938 were in the seven places of between 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places in Oregon ranged in size from Westfall and Whitney towns with a population of 3 to Portland city with a population of 373,628.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the urban population of Oregon consisted of the following components: (1) The 732,247 inhabitants of the 47 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 12,116 inhabitants of the 2 unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 74,955 persons living in the urban fringe of Portland, in Gladstone city, the only incorporated place with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants included in the fringe, and in unincorporated territory. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Oregon, the population of the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--87,071--represents the gain in the urban population of Oregon which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATION

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 14, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 37

POPULATION OF PENNSYLVANIA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Pennsylvania on April 1, 1950, was 10,498,012, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 597,832, or 6.0 percent, over the 9,900,180 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Pennsylvania ranked third in population. The 1950 population was more than 24 times as large as its population in 1790 when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Pennsylvania had 7,403,036 persons living in urban territory and 3,094,976 in rural territory. The urban population accounted for 70.5 percent of the population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 41 of the 67 counties in Pennsylvania increased in population. The most rapid rate of increase was experienced in Bucks County, which gained at the rate of 34.3 percent. The largest numerical increase was recorded in Philadelphia County, which had an increase of 140,271. Two additional counties--Allegheny and Delaware--had increases in excess of 100,000. The combined gain of these three counties accounted for nearly three-fifths of the population gain of the State. The counties in Pennsylvania ranged in size from Forest with a population of 4,944 to Philadelphia with a population of 2,071,605.

In 1950 there were 990 incorporated places in Pennsylvania (cities, boroughs, and one town--Bloomsburg) and 143 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. The 628 incorporated places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants had 588,082 of the 7,166,944 persons living in incorporated places. Of the 259,034 persons in unincorporated places, 180,296 were in the 122 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Livermore borough with a population of 57 to Philadelphia city with a population of 2,071,605.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Pennsylvania consisted of the following components: (1) The 6,583,862 inhabitants of the 362 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 78,738 inhabitants of the 21 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) 740,436 persons living in other territory in the urban fringes of Allentown-Bethlehem, Altoona, Erie, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Lancaster, Pittsburgh, Reading, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, and York and the Pennsylvania parts of the urban-fringe areas of Philadelphia and Trenton, N. J. There were 11 townships in the State that were classified as urban under special rule under the old urban definition. The urban population according to the old definition, therefore, consisted of the 6,583,862 inhabitants of the 362 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 323,131 inhabitants of the places urban under special rule. Of the inhabitants of the 11 places urban under special rule, 307,125 were classified as urban under the new definition by virtue of residence in urban-fringe areas. The remaining 16,006 were classified as rural. On the other hand, the 78,738 inhabitants of the 21 unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and 433,311 additional persons in the urban-fringe areas were included in the rural population according to the old definition. The net gain in the urban population which resulted from the change in definition, therefore, is 496,043.

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

~~August 17, 1951~~

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 38

AUG 26 1951

POPULATION OF RHODE ISLAND: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Rhode Island on April 1, 1950, was 791,896, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 78,550, or 11.0 percent, over the 713,346 persons enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, Rhode Island ranked thirty-seventh in population. The 1950 population of Rhode Island was more than 11 times as large as its population 160 years ago when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

According to the new urban definition, Rhode Island had 667,212 persons living in urban territory and 124,864 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 84.3 percent of the population of the State.

All five of the counties in Rhode Island increased in population between 1940 and 1950. The rates of gain ranged from 4.5 percent for Providence County to 49.4 percent for Washington County. The largest numerical increase was recorded in Providence County, which increased by 24,675. The counties in Rhode Island ranged in size from Bristol with a population of 29,079 to Providence with a population of 574,973.

Rhode Island had 7 places incorporated as cities and 17 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 539,523 persons in the cities and 47,427 in the unincorporated places. All the cities had 2,500 inhabitants or more. Of the inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 20,024 were in the 13 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The cities ranged in size from Central Falls with a population of 23,550 to Providence with a population of 248,674.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe; including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Rhode Island consisted of the following components: (1) The 539,523 inhabitants of the seven cities in the State, all of which had more than 2,500 inhabitants; (2) the 27,403 inhabitants of the four specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) the 100,286 persons living outside of incorporated urban places in the Rhode Island parts of the urban-fringe areas of Providence and Fall River, Mass. There were 12 towns which were classified as urban under special rule according to the old definition.

The 1950 urban population under the old definition, therefore, consisted of the 539,523 inhabitants of the 7 cities and the 160,887 inhabitants of the 12 places urban under special rule. According to the new definition, 95,079 of the inhabitants of the places urban under special rule were urban because they were in urban-fringe areas, 22,179 were urban because they were in unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, and 43,629 were included in the rural population. On the other hand, the new definition included in the urban population 5,224 persons living in an unincorporated place of 2,500 inhabitants or more and an additional 5,207 persons living in urban-fringe areas outside the 12 places urban under special rule, who would have been included in the rural population according to the old definition. The net loss in the urban population which resulted from the change in definition, therefore, is 33,198.

Series PC-8, No. 39

POPULATION OF SOUTH CAROLINA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of South Carolina on April 1, 1950, was 2,117,027, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. Between 1940 and 1950, the population of the State increased by 217,223, or 11.4 percent, over the 1,899,804 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, South Carolina ranked twenty-seventh in population. The 1950 population was about 8½ times as large as its population 160 years ago, when it was enumerated in the first Federal census.

In 1950, according to the new urban definition, South Carolina had an urban population of 777,921 and a rural population of 1,339,106. The urban population constituted 36.7 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 31 of the 46 counties in South Carolina gained population and 15 lost population. Charleston and Richland, two of the most populous counties in the State, experienced the highest percentage increases, 36.1 and 36.0, respectively. Of the counties which lost population, Barnwell had the largest rate of decline, 14.3 percent. The counties of South Carolina ranged in population size from McCormick with 9,557 to Greenville with 168,152.

South Carolina had 239 incorporated places and 58 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 736,412 persons living in the incorporated places and 155,852 in the unincorporated places. These places ranged in size from Snelling town with a population of 34 to Columbia city with a population of 86,914.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the definition used in previous censuses, urban territory was designated as all incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of South Carolina included the following components: (1) The 609,225 inhabitants of the 60 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 100,459 inhabitants of the 23 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (3) the 68,237 persons living in the 1 incorporated place under 2,500 and in unincorporated territory in the urban fringes of Charleston and Columbia, S. C., and the South Carolina part of the urban fringe of Augusta, Ga. Since the first element comprises the urban population under the old definition, the aggregate population of the remaining elements--168,696--represents the gain in the urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATION

ADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

July 14, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 40

POPULATION OF SOUTH DAKOTA: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available.)

The total population of South Dakota on April 1, 1950, was 652,740, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 9,779, or 1.5 percent, over the 642,961 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, South Dakota ranked forty-first in population. The 1950 population of South Dakota was about 55 times as large as its population in 1870, the first year in which Dakota Territory was enumerated by areas that can be grouped to produce the approximate area of the State. South Dakota was admitted to the Union in 1889.

According to the new urban definition, South Dakota had 216,710 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 436,030 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 33.2 percent of the total population of the State. The trend in the urban and rural population can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On that basis, the urban population increased by 58,070, or 36.7 percent, whereas the rural population dropped by 48,291, or 10.0 percent. The numerical increase in the urban population was the largest intercensal gain in the urban population in the history of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 21 of the 68 counties in South Dakota gained population, whereas 47 lost population. Of the 24 counties which had urban population, 15 gained population. The most rapid rate of growth--43.1 percent--was experienced in Pennington County, the second largest county in the State. The largest numerical increase was recorded in Minnehaha County.

The counties in South Dakota ranged in size from Armstrong with a population of 52 to Minnehaha with a population of 70,910.

South Dakota had a total of 306 incorporated places with a combined population of 347,636 and 1 unincorporated place of 2,217 inhabitants. Of the 306 incorporated places, 25 had 2,500 inhabitants or more and an aggregate population of 216,157. The incorporated places ranged in size from Carter town with a population of 16 to Sioux Falls city with a population of 52,696.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural.

According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the new definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are also urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new definition, the 1950 urban population of South Dakota included (1) the 216,157 inhabitants of the 25 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, and (2) the 553 persons living in unincorporated territory of the South Dakota part of the urban fringe of Sioux City, Iowa. Since the first element comprises the urban population under the old definition, the population of the remaining element--553--represents the gain in urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

1950 CENSUS OF POPULATIONADVANCE REPORTS

FOR RELEASE

October 7, 1951

Washington 25, D. C.

Series PC-8, No. 41

POPULATION OF TENNESSEE: APRIL 1, 1950

(This is one of a series of reports presenting final population figures for selected areas in each State. In this series, reports are numbered alphabetically by States. Additional reports will be issued as final figures for other States become available)

The total population of Tennessee on April 1, 1950, was 3,291,718, according to final figures for the State released today by Roy V. Peel, Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During the previous 10 years, the population of the State increased by 375,877, or 12.9 percent, over the 2,915,841 inhabitants enumerated in 1940. Among the States, Tennessee ranked sixteenth in population. The 1950 population was more than 31 times as large as the population of Tennessee in 1800 when it was first enumerated as a State.

According to the new urban definition, Tennessee had 1,452,602 persons living in urban territory in 1950 and 1,839,116 in rural territory. The urban population comprised 44.1 percent of the total population of the State.

Between 1940 and 1950, 52 of the 95 counties in Tennessee gained population. The most rapid rate of increase--124.1 percent--was experienced in Anderson County. The largest numerical gain occurred in Shelby County, which had a gain of 124,143. Nearly seven-tenths of the population increase for the State was accounted by the four counties having 100,000 inhabitants or more--Shelby, Davidson, Knox, and Hamilton. The counties in Tennessee ranged in size from Moore with a population of 3,948 to Shelby with a population of 482,393.

Tennessee had 238 places incorporated as cities and towns and 23 unincorporated places of 1,000 or more inhabitants. Of the 1,410,123 persons living in the incorporated places, 145,964 were in the 174 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. There were 80,545 persons living in the unincorporated places, 24,458 of whom were living in the 16 places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Dale Hollow town with a population of 5 to Memphis city with a population of 396,000.

Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Tennessee included the following components: (1) The 1,264,159 inhabitants of the 64 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (2) the 56,087 inhabitants of the 7 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more; (3) the 132,356 persons living in other territory included in the urban-fringe areas of Knoxville, Memphis, and Nashville and the Tennessee part of the urban fringe of Chattanooga. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Tennessee according to the old definition, the first element comprised the urban population under the old definition. The population of the remaining elements--188,443--represents the gain in the urban population of Tennessee which resulted from the change in definition.
