TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Pennsylvania was one of the thirteen original states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 8,720,017, which represents an increase of 1,054,906, or 13.8 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Pennsylvania from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Pennsylvania has 67 counties, of which 46 show increases and 21 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.)

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 44,832 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 194.5 (see Table 1), as against 171 in 1910 and 140.6 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of Pennsylvania are made up of 2,544 primary divisions, comprising 1,567 townships, 39 cities, 933 incorporated boroughs, and 1 incorporated town. One of the cities, Philadelphia, is coextensive with the county of the same name. There are no secondary divisions. The Cornplanter Indian Reservation, located in Elk township, Warren County, is treated for census purposes as a part of that county, although the reservation is independent of the county and township organizations. (See Table 2.)

POPULATION—PENNSYLVANIA.

Cities.—Pennsylvania has 39 cities, of which Philadelphia, with a population of 1,823,779, is the largest, and Pittsburgh, with 588,343, is the second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city and borough having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Pennsylvania living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 54.7 per cent in 1900 to 60.4 per cent in 1910 and to 64.3 per cent in 1920.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Rhode Island was one of the original thirteen states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 604,397, which represents an increase of 61,787, or 11.4 per cent, over the population in 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Rhode Island from 1790, the first Federal census, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase in each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole.

Counties.—Rhode Island has 5 counties, 4 of which increased in population during the last decade, but the decrease in the remaining county was less than one-tenth of 1 per cent (see Table 1). There have been no changes in county boundaries since 1850 except those involved in the straightening of certain boundary lines.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state in 1920 is 1,067 square miles and the average number of persons to the square mile is 566.4 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 508.5 and 401.6, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political divisions into which counties are subdivided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." In Rhode Island the primary division of the county is the town or city, and in 1920 these number 33 and 6, respectively (see Table 2). Villages are not incorporated as such in this state.

Cities.—Of the 6 cities of Rhode Island, all but 1 (Central Falls) have a population over 25,000 in 1920, Providence, the largest, having 237,595 inhabitants. The next largest city is Pawtucket, with 64,248, the remaining cities having more than 25,000 but less than 50,000 inhabitants. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

POPULATION—RHODE ISLAND.

The following summary shows the population of the cities of Rhode Island at each census for which figures are available, together with the increase during each decade.

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. As it is not the practice in Rhode Island, as in nearly all the other states, to have municipal incorporations, such as villages, within the limits of town, and as no town becomes a city until its population is greatly in excess of 2,500, it has been necessary to include in the urban territory not only the population of cities but that of all towns having over 2,500 inhabitants. The result is that the "urban area" in Rhode Island includes some population which in other states would be segregated as "rural," but on account of the density of population of the state as a whole, there is no reason to suppose that the proportion of urban population is greatly overstated. Urban population in Rhode Island being thus defined, the rural population, therefore, consists of the population located in towns having less than 2,500 inhabitants.

The following summary presents the urban and rural population of the state distributed among cities and towns, grouped according to specified limits of population at the last three censuses. The classification is based upon the population of each place as it existed at each census. The proportion of the population of Rhode Island living in cities and towns of 2,500 or more at the three census periods was 97.5, 96.7, and 95.1, respectively, the proportion showing a slight increase in each decade.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—South Carolina was one of the thirteen original states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 1,683,724, which represents an increase of 168,324, or 11.1 per cent, over the 1910 figure. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of South Carolina from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—South Carolina has 46 counties, of which 9 show decreases in population as compared with 1910. Five of these decreases, however, are due to reductions in area. Three new counties—Allendale, Jasper, and McCormick—have been organized from parts of six others since 1910. (See Table 1.) It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population of counties between 1910 and 1920, to combine Allendale, Jasper, Barnwell, Beaufort, and Hampton Counties and to combine McCormick, Abbeville, Edgefield, and Greenwood Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 30,495 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 55.2 (see Table 1), as against 49.7 in 1910 and 44 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of South Carolina are made up of 499 primary divisions, comprising 440 townships, 58 school districts, and the city of Charleston. The secondary divisions are 260 in number, comprising 14 cities and 246 towns. Each of 2 cities is coextensive with the township and 1

city with the school district in which located, and each of 27 towns comprises parts of 2 or more townships. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—South Carolina has 15 cities, of which Charleston, with a population of 67,957, is the largest. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 9,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of South Carolina living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 12.8 per cent in 1900 to 14.8 per cent in 1910 and to 17.5 per cent in 1920.

Rural population is defined as that residing outside of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more.

A map of South Carolina showing its 46 counties. The counties are labeled with their names. Shading patterns indicate population density: diagonal lines for 100-200 persons per square mile, cross-hatching for 200-300 persons per square mile, and stippling for 300-400 persons per square mile. Five counties are unshaded, indicating a population density of less than 100 persons per square mile. These counties are Fairfield (-7.8), Richland, Lexington, Georgetown (-2.6), and Colleton (-15.5). Other counties with specific density values include Berkeley (-4.0) and Dorchester (-1.0).

5. Urban and rural population of counties: 1920, 1910, and 1900.....	22

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—South Dakota was organized as a state from a part of Dakota territory and was admitted to the Union in November, 1889. (The two Dakotas, which were admitted by the same act of Congress, were the thirty-ninth and fortieth states to enter the Union.) Dakota territory was organized in 1861, and at that time included the region now constituting the greater part of Montana and nearly half of Wyoming; but the organization of Idaho territory in 1863 and Wyoming territory in 1868 reduced the area of Dakota territory to substantially that of the present states of North and South Dakota. The only change in the area of South Dakota since it became a state is that resulting from the cession in 1908 of a small tract of land from Union County to Nebraska. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, the population of South Dakota is 636,547, which represents an increase of 52,659, or 9 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of South Dakota from 1890 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States. The population of that part of Dakota territory which now constitutes the state of South Dakota was 98,268 in 1880 and 11,776 in 1870.

Counties.—South Dakota has 68 counties, 4 of which are unorganized. Four new counties have been organized from 3 unorganized counties and parts of 2 organized counties since 1910. Of the 62 counties whose boundaries have remained unchanged, 12 show decreases in population since 1910. (See Table 1.) Because the population of certain counties was not returned separately in 1910, and because of changes in boundaries resulting from the organization of new counties, it has been necessary, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population, to combine Bennett, Shannon, Washa-baugh, and Washington Counties; Haakon, Jackson, and Stanley Counties; and Jones and Lyman Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 76,868 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 8.3 (see Table 1), as against 7.6 in 1910 and 5.2 in 1900.

POPULATION—SOUTH DAKOTA.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of South Dakota are made up of 2,130 primary divisions, comprising 1,093 organized townships, 491 unorganized townships (including 26 for which no population was reported), 107 school townships, 80 school districts, 89 election precincts, 139 cities, and 131 towns. There are only 5 secondary divisions in the state, 2 cities and 3 towns. Besides these primary and secondary divisions, there are 5 Indian reservations, 2 of which comprise the 4 unorganized counties of the state; unorganized territory, not returned by townships, in Marshall County and Fort Meade in Meade County. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—South Dakota has 141 cities, of which Sioux Falls, with a population of 25,202, is the largest. Aberdeen, with 14,537, is the only other city having more than 10,000 inhabitants. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 5,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, since any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of South Dakota living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 10.2 per cent in 1900 to 13.1 per cent in 1910 and to 16 per cent in 1920.

LAWRENCE.—Formed from unorganized territory in 1875; part taken to form part of Butte in 1883, and Meade in 1889.

*In computing the per cent of increase for Buffalo County from 1890 to 1900 the population (1,123) of Indian reservations in 1900 has been deducted from the total for the county in order to make it comparable with the total for 1890, which does not include the population of Indian reservations.

*No population reported.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Tennessee was admitted to the Union as the sixteenth state on June 1, 1796. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,337,885, which represents an increase of 153,096, or 7 per cent, over the 1910 figure. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Tennessee from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Tennessee has 95 counties, of which 58 show increases and 37 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.) In addition to the changes in county boundaries during the decade as indicated in the footnotes to Tables 1 and 2, there were numerous slight changes, of less than 1 square mile in area in each case and involving no transfer of population, which have been disregarded.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 41,687 square miles and the average number of persons to the square mile in 1920 is 56.1 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 52.4 and 48.5, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The primary divisions of the counties of Tennessee are the civil districts, of which there are 1,208. There are also 236 secondary divisions, comprising 28 cities, 202 towns, and 6 villages. These secondary divisions usually form parts of their respective civil districts, but a city may be coextensive with the civil district in which it is located, as Chattanooga and Nashville, or it may include within its limits one or more districts and parts of others, as Knoxville and Memphis.

Cities.—Tennessee has 2 cities (Memphis and Nashville) which have more than 100,000 inhabitants and 2 (Knoxville and Chattanooga) which have between 50,000 and 100,000 inhabitants. Of the remaining municipalities in the state, Jackson city, with 18,860 inhabitants, and Johnson City town, with 12,442, are the only ones in which the population exceeds 10,000.

The following summary shows, for each municipality having 10,000 inhabitants or more in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Tennessee living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 16.2 per cent in 1900 to 20.2 per cent in 1910 and to 26.1 per cent in 1920.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Texas, originally a part of Mexico, won its independence by revolution in 1835 and 1836 and continued as an independent republic until 1845, when it was annexed to the United States and admitted to the Union as the twenty-eighth state. Territory now constituting parts of New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, and a small part of Wyoming was included within the limits of the state until 1850, when its boundaries were established as at present. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 4,663,228, which represents an increase of 766,686, or 19.7 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Texas from 1850 to 1920, inclusive, with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Texas has 253 counties, of which 4 are unorganized. Eight new counties have been formed from parts of 10 others and 2 counties have been organized from unorganized counties of the same names since 1910. Of the 235 counties whose boundaries have remained unchanged, 154 show increases and 80 decreases as compared with 1910, and in one county, Hockley, the population reported in 1920 is the same as that for 1910. (See Table 1.) Because of the changes in boundaries due to the formation of the new counties, it has been necessary, in preparing the maps (pp. 3 and 4) showing rates of increase and decrease in total and rural population of counties between 1910 and 1920, to make the following combinations: Brooks, Cameron, Duval, Hidalgo, Jim Hogg, Starr, Willacy, and Zapata; Culberson, El Paso, and Hudspeth; Jim Wells, Kleberg, and Nueces; Bandera, Edwards, Kerr, and Real.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 262,398 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 17.8 (see Table 1), as against 14.8 in 1910 and 11.6 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The 249 organized counties of Texas are made up of 1,582 primary divisions, comprising 1,544 justice precincts, 12 commissioners' precincts, 5 voting precincts, and 21 school districts. The secondary divisions, 455 in number, comprise 171 cities, 276 towns (including 1—Toyah, in Reeves County—not returned separately in 1920), and 8 villages. Two cities and 1 town are coextensive with the precincts in which located, and each of 6 cities and 3 towns comprises 2 or more precincts or parts of precincts. (See Table 2.)

POPULATION—TEXAS.

Cities.—Texas has 171 cities, of which San Antonio, with a population of 161,379, is the largest. Three other cities—Dallas, Houston, and Fort Worth—have more than 100,000 inhabitants each. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Texas living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 17.1 per cent in 1900 to 24.1 per cent in 1910 and to 32.4 per cent in 1920.

TABLE 2.—POPULATION OF COUNTIES BY MINOR CIVIL DIVISIONS: 1920, 1910, AND 1900.

[Precinct, unless otherwise stated, means justice precinct. Counties showing no totals for 1910 or 1900 have been organized from parts of other counties at some time between the censuses; counties showing totals but no comparative precinct figures for 1910 or 1900 have been redivided at some time between the censuses or have been organized from unorganized counties of same names. For other changes in boundaries, etc., between 1910 and 1920, see footnotes; for those between 1900 and 1910, see Reports of the Thirteenth Census: 1910, Vol. III, Table I, p. 778. For population of incorporated places, see Table 3.]

[Precinct, unless otherwise stated, means justice precinct. Counties showing no totals for 1910 or 1900 have been organized from parts of other counties at some time between the censuses; counties showing totals but no comparative precinct figures for 1910 or 1900 have been reorganized from parts of other counties at some time between the censuses or have been organized from unorganized counties of same names. For other changes in boundaries, etc., between 1910 and 1920, see footnotes; for those between 1900 and 1910, see Reports of the Thirteenth Census: 1910, Vol. III, Table 1, p. 778. For population of incorporated places, see Table 3.]

Population of the state.—Utah was organized as a territory in 1850 and admitted to the Union as the forty-fifth state in 1896. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 449,396, representing an increase of 76,045, or 20.4 per cent, over the population in 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Utah as returned at each census from 1850 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase in each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Utah has 29 counties, of which 3 (Juab, Summit, and Wasatch) show a decrease in population during the last decade. The large decrease in Wasatch County is due to a reduction in area, part of its territory having been organized as Duchesne County in 1915. Daggett was also organized during the last decade from part of Uintah County, and changes were made in the boundaries of Rich and Summit Counties. (See Table 1.)

In preparing the maps on page 3, showing increase in total and rural population since 1910, the population of Daggett and Uintah Counties in 1920 has been combined, and a similar combination has been made in the case of Duchesne and Wasatch Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 82,184 square miles, and the average number of persons to the square mile in 1920 is 5.5 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 4.5 and 3.4, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The primary divisions of the counties of Utah are the election precincts, of which there are 429 in 1920. There are also 137 secondary divisions, of which 58 are cities and 79 are incorporated towns. These secondary divisions usually form parts of their respective precincts, but 15 cities and towns are coextensive with the precincts in which located, and one city and one town each comprise the whole of one precinct and part of another. Besides these minor civil divisions, the state contains 3 Indian reservations and a part of another. These reservations, though independent of any county organization, are shown in Table 2 under the counties in which they are wholly or partly located.

Cities.—Utah has 58 cities, of which Salt Lake City, with a population of 118,110, is the largest, and Ogden, with 32,804, is the second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 5,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Utah living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 33.1 per cent in 1900 to 46.3 per cent in 1910 and to 48 per cent in 1920.

TABLE 1.—AREA AND POPULATION OF COUNTIES: 1850 TO 1920.

[In computing the increase from 1890 to 1900 for certain counties, the population of Indian reservations in 1900 has been deducted from the total population of the county in order to make it comparable with the total for 1890, which does not include the population of Indian reservations. The population thus deducted in the several counties was as follows: San Juan, 160; Uintah, 1,467; Wasatch, 170.]

CHANGES IN BOUNDARIES, ETC.

THE STATE.—State totals include population as follows: In 1890, population (2,874) of Indian reservations specially enumerated but not distributed by counties; in 1870, population (450) of Rio Virgin County, part annexed to the state of Nevada in 1871 and remainder annexed to Washington County in 1872; in 1860, population (741) of Cedar County, of whose disappearance there is no record; population (141) of Green River County, now in Wyoming, and population (162) of Shambip County, annexed to Juab, Tooele, and Utah Counties between 1860 and 1870.

BOX ELDER.—Part of Salt Lake annexed in 1880.

CARBON.—Organized from part of Emery in 1894.

DAGGETT.—Organized from part of Uintah in 1918.

DAVIS.—Part of Salt Lake annexed in 1880.

DUCHESTER.—Organized from part of Wasatch in 1915; part of Uintah annexed in 1917.

EMERY.—Organized from parts of Sanpete, Sevier, and Wasatch in 1880; parts taken to form Grand in 1890 and Carbon in 1894.

GARFIELD.—Organized from parts of Iron and Kane in 1882; part of Kane annexed between 1860 and 1900.

GRAND.—Organized from part of Emery in 1890.

IRON.—Parts taken to form part of San Juan in 1880 and part of Garfield in 1882.

JUAB.—Part of Shambip annexed between 1860 and 1870.

KANE.—Parts taken to form part of San Juan in 1880 and part of Garfield in 1882; parts annexed to Washington in 1882 and Garfield between 1890 and 1900.

PIUTE.—Part taken to form part of San Juan in 1880; part taken to form Wayne in 1892; part annexed to Sevier in 1902.

RICH.—Part of Summit annexed in 1917.

SALT LAKE.—Parts annexed to Box Elder, Davis, Tooele, and Weber in 1880.

SAN JUAN.—Organized from parts of Iron, Kane, and Piute in 1880.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Vermont was admitted as a state in 1791, being the first state admitted into the Union after the adoption of the Constitution by the original thirteen states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, the population of Vermont is 352,428. This represents a decrease of 3,528, or 1 per cent, from the population in 1910.

During the same period the rate of increase for the United States was 14.9.

The following summary shows the population of Vermont from 1790 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase in each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Vermont has 14 counties, 8 of which show a decrease in population during the last decade. (See Table 1.) There have been no changes in county boundaries since 1910.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 9,124 square miles and the average number of persons to the square mile in 1920 is 38.6 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 39 and 37.7, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." In Vermont the counties are divided into 255 primary divisions, comprising 240 towns, 7 cities, 4 gores, 3 unorganized townships, and 1 grant. Averys gore, in Franklin County, for which no population has been reported at the last three censuses, is not shown in Table 2. The 69 villages constitute the secondary divisions, all of which form parts of the towns in which they are located. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Vermont has 7 cities, only 3 of which exceed 10,000 in population—Burlington, Rutland, and Barre. (See Tables 3 and 4.) The following summary shows for each of the cities having 5,000 inhabitants or more in 1920 the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the increase during each decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside of such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses.

The proportion of the population of Vermont living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 22.1 in 1900 to 27.8 in 1910 and to 31.2 in 1920.

TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Virginia, one of the thirteen original states, included, in 1790, the areas now constituting Kentucky (admitted to the Union as a separate state in 1792) and West Virginia (admitted to the Union as a separate state in 1863). According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,309,187, which represents an increase of 247,575, or 12 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Virginia from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole. The population shown for 1790 does not include that of the present state of Kentucky, but the population given for each census year prior to 1870 includes that of the present state of West Virginia. The population, at censuses prior to 1870, of the present area of Virginia was as follows: 1860, 1,219,630; 1850, 1,119,348; 1840, 1,015,260; 1830, 1,034,481; 1820, 928,558; 1810, 869,131; 1800, 801,608; 1790, 691,737.

Counties.—Virginia has 100 counties and 20 independent cities, each of the latter having the same status as a county. (See Table 1.) No new counties have been formed during the past decade, and no changes in county boundaries have taken place except those resulting from the annexation of parts of counties to independent cities. Of the 100 counties and combinations of counties with independent cities presented in Table 1, 63 show increases and 37 decreases as compared with 1910. In the preparation of Tables 1 and 5, and of the maps on pages 4 and 5, showing rates of increase or decrease and density of population, by counties, the independent cities have been combined with the counties in which they are located.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 40,262 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 57.4 (see Table 1), as against 51.2 in 1910 and 46.1 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of Virginia are made up of 445 primary divisions, comprising 444 magisterial districts and 1 city, Williamsburg, in James City County. The secondary divisions are 182 in number, consisting of 181 towns and 1 city, Hampton, which is coextensive with the magisterial district in which located. Each of 12 towns comprises parts of 2 or more magisterial districts. In addition to these minor civil divisions, Fort Monroe is returned in Chesapeake district, Elizabeth City County, and is treated for census purposes as forming a part of that district, although independent of the county or district organization. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Virginia has 22 cities, of which Richmond, with a population of 171,667, is the largest, and Norfolk, with 115,777, is second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 15,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Virginia living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 18.3 per cent in 1900 to 23.1 per cent in 1910 and to 29.2 per cent in 1920.

TABLE 1.—AREA AND POPULATION OF COUNTIES AND COMBINATIONS OF COUNTIES WITH INDEPENDENT CITIES LOCATED THEREIN: 1850 TO 1920.

[As most of the 21 cities shown in this table have become independent since 1850, they are presented in combination with the counties in which they are located, and of which they formerly formed parts, in order to secure comparable population figures for the several censuses covered by the table. For population of counties and cities separately for 1920, 1910, and 1900, see Table 2; for previous years, see earlier census reports.]
