CHAPTER 8.—CITIZENSHIP OF THE FOREIGN BORN

INTRODUCTION

The inquiry as to the citizenship of the foreign born has been made at each census beginning with 1890. In that year, however, no tabulation was made by color or race; and in 1890, 1900, and 1910 the returns related only to foreign-born males 21 years of age and over. At the census of 1920, which was the first census subsequent to the adoption of the 19th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, complete data as to citizenship were presented for foreign-born persons of both sexes; and the tabulations were extended to cover persons of all ages rather than being limited to those of voting age only.

The statistics here presented relate to the population of continental United States, the States, and those cities having 25,000 inhabitants or more. Citizenship data for the foreign-born white population 21 years old and over, by sex, are presented by counties and for cities and other urban places of 2,500 or more inhabitants in Volume III of the Reports on Population and in the Second Series State bulletins of which that volume is made up. Statistics for Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, and the Panama Canal Zone are given in the Fifteenth Census Report on Outlying Territories and Possessions.

The citizenship classification.—The classification in regard to citizenship embraces three specific groups, namely, naturalized, having first papers, and alien, the last comprising those persons who have taken no steps toward becoming naturalized. In addition, there is a fourth group, designated "Unknown," and made up of persons for whom the enumerator secured no report as to citizenship.

The "first papers" constitute the declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, which declaration may be made by any eligible alien 18 years of age or more at any time after arrival in the United States. The process of naturalization can not ordinarily be completed, however, until at least two years (but not more than seven years) have elapsed after the declaration of intention; nor until the applicant has resided at least five years continuously in the United States and at least six months continuously in the county in which his petition is filed. Following the World War the requirement of five years of residence was in some cases waived on account of military or naval service. Under the present naturalization law, an exception to the requirement of five years' residence is made in the case of an alien woman who married a citizen after September 22, 1922, or whose husband was naturalized after that date. Under these conditions, a woman may be naturalized without making a declaration of intention and after but one year's residence in the United States.

Under the provisions of the naturalization laws in force at the time the Fourteenth Census was taken in 1920, the citizenship status of a married woman was the same as that of her husband (but if the husband had taken out his first naturalization papers only, his wife was classified in the census returns as an alien); for an unmarried woman the process of naturalization was the same as for a man; a foreignborn widow or foreign-born divorced wife of a citizen of the United States retained the citizenship status of her former husband so long as she continued to reside in this country; a foreign-born widow or foreign-born divorced wife of an alien might become naturalized in the same manner as a man; and, in general, foreignborn minors had the same citizenship status as their parents.

By an act of Congress approved September 22, 1922, and effective from that date, it is provided that the citizenship status of a married woman shall no longer follow that of her husband, and that a married woman shall have the privilege of becoming naturalized on her own account. The status of single alien women is not changed by this law. The act referred to further provides that any woman citizen who marries an alien shall not cease to be a citizen unless she makes a formal renunciation of her citizenship, or unless she marries an alien ineligible to citizenship, in which case she shall cease to be a citizen; and that no married woman whose husband is not eligible to citizenship shall be naturalized during the continuance of the marital status. Under the present law the citizenship of legitimate minor children in general follows that of the father.

The citizenship data for the United States are summarized in Table 1, which gives the figures for the total foreign born, for the foreign-born white, and for the foreign-born white 21 years old and over.

¹ Adjusted for comparison with 1930 by subtracting from the 1920 foreign-born white population as reported the estimated number of persons who would have been counted as Mexican in 1930, (See Table 4.)

Since the foreign-born population of the United States consists mainly of white persons, the statistics in most of the tables relate to the foreign-born white alone. In Table 10, however, as well as in Table 1, citizenship figures are given for the total foreign-born population of all races; and in Table 4 a separate presentation is made for each of the several color or race classes eligible to citizenship.

Citizenship by naturalization is open only to "white persons" or "persons of African nativity or African descent." Mexicans are considered as white in the interpretation of the naturalization laws, and are therefore eligible to citizenship, though a relatively small proportion of them have become citizens.

Foreign-born Chinese and Japanese, and other nonwhite Asiatics of foreign birth, are not eligible to citizenship. A small number of Chinese may have been naturalized prior to 1882, in which year their legal ineligibility was made more explicit; and a few more Chinese and some Japanese may have been illegally admitted to citizenship prior to 1906, when measures were adopted for a stricter enforcement of the regulations. Small numbers of Chinese and Japanese were returned as naturalized and some were returned as having first papers, but since nearly all of these returns were obviously due either to a misunderstanding of the question or to deliberate misstatement, they have been entirely disregarded, and all foreignborn Chinese, Japanese, and other nonwhite Asiatics have been counted as aliens. Where comparative data

 $\| (x,y) \in C_{0} \quad \forall \quad y \in C_{0} \quad (x,y) \in C_{0} \quad \forall \quad y \in C_{0} \quad (x,y) \in C_{0} \quad \forall \quad y \in C_{0} \quad (x,y) \in C_{0} \quad \forall \quad y \in C_{0} \quad (x,y) \in C_$ and the transmission of the first are presented for earlier censuses, the figures have been revised in this respect, so far as possible, and placed on the same basis as those for 1930.

For most purposes where a figure representing the total alien population is required it would seem best to include not only the classes specifically designated as alien in the tables, but also those having first papers (since they had not become citizens at the time of the census) and those for whom no citizenship return was made (designated "unknown"). This last group doubtless contains a few persons who are naturalized, but it seems relatively unlikely that a person who had obtained his naturalization would fail to report that fact, or that it would be unknown to the members of the family in which he lived.

The sharp decline in the proportion of males 21 years old and over returned as naturalized which occurred between 1900 and 1910, as shown in Table 13, was undoubtedly due to the exceptionally heavy immigration between 1905 and 1910. This resulted in a foreignborn population in 1910 of which more than one-fifth were ineligible for full citizenship, because of less than five years' residence in the United States, as compared with less than one-tenth in 1900. In 1920 only about one-sixteenth of the foreign-born population had been in the United States less than five years, but naturalization laws had become more rigid since 1900 and changes had taken place in the national origins of the foreignborn population which made rapid assimilation somewhat more difficult. The stimulation of the lovalty of the immigrant to his native country which resulted from the war may also have caused many to delay making application for naturalization. By 1930 the influences adverse to the process of assimilation had been largely overcome and the proportion of the foreign born who had been naturalized reached a point considerably above that of 1900.

Citizenship by country of birth.—One of the most significant classifications of the citizenship data is that by country of birth. In general the foreign-born white from countries which contributed early to the population of the United States, like England, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries, show a relatively high percentage naturalized, while those from countries from which most of the immigrants have arrived within the past two or three decades show a much lower percentage. There are differences as between individual countries, however, which are based on factors other than the time of arrival in the United States.

The citizenship figures for the foreign-born white from the more important countries are summarized in Table 2.

Urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm population.— Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. In three of the New England States, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, towns (townships) are classified as urban if they have a population of 2,500 or more and certain urban characteristics; and a few large and densely populated townships in other States are likewise classified, even though not formally incorporated as municipalities.

In addition to the classification of the population as urban and rural, the rural population is subdivided into rural-farm and rural-nonfarm on the basis of the replies to a question reading "Does this family live on a farm?" The rural-farm population includes all persons living on farms in the rural areas. The rural-nonfarm or "village" population is made up largely of persons living in small towns or villages, both incorporated or unincorporated, though in many areas there are considerable numbers of families living in the open country but not on farms.

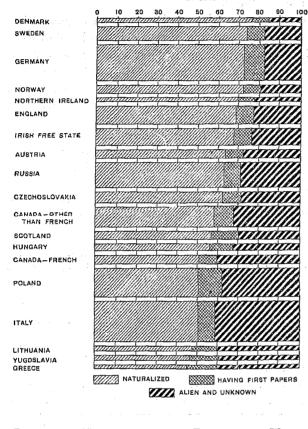

The citizenship data for the foreign-born white population in urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas is summarized in Table 3.
