FAMILIES

INTRODUCTION

In this section are presented statistics relating to families in continental United States. Figures are given for States, for cities and other urban places having 25,000 inhabitants or more, and for urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas.

Definition of family.—The term "family," as it is used in the tabulation of the results of the 1930 census, is limited in the main to what might be called private families, excluding the institutions and hotel or boarding-house groups which have been counted as families in prior censuses. A family may therefore be defined in general as a group of persons related either by blood or by marriage or adoption, who live together as one household, usually sharing the same table. Single persons living alone are counted as families, however, as are a few small groups of unrelated persons sharing the same living accommodations as "partners." Households reporting more than 10 lodgers are classified as boarding or lodging houses rather than as families. Two or more related persons occupying permanent quarters in a hotel are counted as a private family rather than as a part of the hotel group.

Color and nativity.—Families are classified according to the color and nativity of the head. A foreign-born white family, for example, is a family whose head is a foreign-born white person. Since most of the children in a family of this kind are likely to be native (of foreign or mixed parentage), the percentage of the population classified as native white is considerably higher in most areas than the percentage of the families so classified.

Tenure of home.—Since a home is defined as the living quarters occupied by a family, the number of homes is always the same as the number of families. In the classification by tenure a home is counted as owned if it is owned wholly or in part by any related member of the family.

Size of family.—In the classification of families according to size only those persons related to the head of the family by blood, marriage, or adoption are counted, lodgers, resident servants, guests, and foster children or wards being omitted. Size of family in this sense differs considerably from the average population per family which may be obtained by dividing the total population by the number of families, since the latter includes lodgers and other unrelated persons.

Median size and value.—In addition to the classification of families by size and of nonfarm homes by value or rental, medians are presented for size of family and value or rental of home. The median value is the value of the home which would stand in the middle of the series if all of the homes were arranged according to value, beginning with the lowest and ending with the highest. It is not possible from the data available to compute the arithmetical average of the value or monthly rental, since no definite value can be assigned to the first value group (under $1,000) or to the last ($20,000 and over). The median is therefore the most practicable and useful of the summary figures that could be computed.

The median size of family, since it is presented with a decimal or fraction, must be interpreted in an abstract or theoretical sense, rather than literally. For practical purposes, however, it is not necessary to go into the mathematical theory, or the process of computing the median. It may simply be accepted as a convenient summary figure representing the size of the family in the various areas and the various population classes. Medians of 3.34 for native white families and 3.74 for foreign-born white families, for example, indicate that the foreign-born white families are considerably the larger, and give a definite measure of the difference in size.

Value or rental of home.—The enumerator was instructed to report on the population schedule for each nonfarm family returned as owning its home the approximate current market value of the home, and for each nonfarm family returned as occupying rented quarters, the monthly rental, or if rental was not paid by the month, then the equivalent monthly rental or the approximate rental value per month. In the tabulation the values and the rentals have been assembled into 10 groups, and the figures presented represent the number of homes in each of these groups.

Children under 10 and under 21 years old.—In making the classification of families according to number of children under 10 or under 21 years of age, the whole number of such children in the family who are related in any way to the head of the family is counted, including adopted children, grandchildren, nephews, nieces, etc., though the children of the head of the family make up by far the larger part of the total number of children.

Gainful workers.—In the classification of families according to the number of gainful workers, all the related members of the family who were reported as usually working at a gainful occupation are counted, including some who were temporarily unemployed at the time of the census. Gainfully employed lodgers or boarders are not counted. The families reporting no gainful workers are mainly those of widows and of elderly men who have retired from active employment.

Lodgers.—In the classification of families according to number of lodgers, certain other persons besides those directly returned as lodgers or boarders are included, the more important of these being farm laborers living in a farm family, foster children or wards, and guests. On the other hand, it should be noted that no household having more than 10 lodgers is included in the classification of private families.

Age of head of family.—In the tables presented herewith the classification of families by age of head is limited to those families with a man as head. Since these comprise about seven-eighths of the whole number, however, this presentation is believed to be fairly adequate.

Employment status of home-maker.—The enumerator, in filling out the population schedule, was instructed to designate as "home-maker" that woman member of the family who was responsible for the care of the home and family. (Hired housekeepers were not counted as home-makers.) On the basis of this designation, certain information with regard to the home-maker has been tabulated; in particular, information as to whether or not the home-maker pursued a gainful occupation in addition to caring for the home. The number of gainfully employed home-makers is first divided into those employed at home and those employed away from home; each group is then further subdivided according to the kind of occupation followed. All professional workers are included in the class designated as employed away from home, even though in a few cases the professional work may be done in the worker's own home, it being considered very important to show in this group the whole number of home-makers doing professional work. Home-makers returned as engaged in agricultural occupations at home consist partly of women operating their own farms and partly of women working on the home farm without wages.

Quasi-family groups.—The households or population groups which have been omitted from the 1930 count of families (private families) are shown separately in Tables 22, 39, and 52, under the designation "quasi-family groups," with the number of persons in them. Table 22 shows separately the number of institutions, boarding and lodging houses, hotels, etc., included in this classification.

Families having radio set.—The tabulations relating to radio sets show the number of families (not including institutions, etc.) having a radio set. The figures, therefore, do not represent the whole number of radio sets in existence or in use, since one family may have two or more sets, and since there are a considerable number of sets in use in stores and other commercial or industrial buildings, and in hotels, boarding houses, and institutions.

Dwellings.—A dwelling, for census purposes, is a place in which one or more persons regularly sleep. It need not be a house in the usual sense of the word. A boat, a tent, or a room in a factory or office building, although occupied by only one person, is also counted as a dwelling; while, on the other hand, an entire apartment house, although containing many families, constitutes but one dwelling.

Dwellings have been classified into three groups, namely (a) those occupied by 1 family only, (b) those occupied by 2 families, and (c) those occupied by 3 or more families. It has been found difficult in some cases, particularly in cities where the houses are built in solid blocks, to make this classification. The enumerators were instructed to return as 1 dwelling a 2-family house with one apartment above the other, even though there was a separate front door for each apartment. On the other hand, where 2 families occupied parts of a building separated by a solid wall running up through the building, each part was counted as a dwelling, and likewise each "house" in a block or section of "row" houses.

The figures for dwellings in earlier censuses include the premises occupied by institutions, etc., which is in harmony with the inclusion of such population groups in the count of the number of families. The number of dwellings presented for 1930, except where specially noted, is the number occupied by private families.

Urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas.—Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. For a further explanation of this classification, see page 5.

Detailed reports on families.—The family statistics presented in this section of the Abstract have been taken from Volume VI of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population, entitled "Families." This volume is made up of a series of bulletins, one for each State and one for the United States as a whole. Most of these bulletins can be obtained in separate form by those desiring the statistics for a single State, or for the United States alone.

<sup>3</sup> In addition to the number of normal or private families, the count of families in censuses prior to 1930 has included certain aggregates of population, such as institutions, hotels, boarding houses, and construction camps. These quasi families are omitted from the general tabulation for families in 1930, but are included here for comparative purposes.

<sup>4</sup> Based on the number of private families and the population in such families, including lodgers and resident servants.
