

CENSUS OF MANUFACTURES, 1939

Alphabetical List of Products and the Number of the Industry to Which Each Is Assigned

INTRODUCTION

There are 453 separate industry classifications for the 1939 Census of Manufactures. Each accepted establishment report is assigned to one of these classifications according to its product of chief value or, in some cases, the process of manufacture.

This alphabetical list of products, together with the 1939 industry number in which each product is to be classified and the number of the schedule form used in 1939 to canvass establishments manufacturing the various products, also includes the 1937 industry number for each product in order to facilitate the comparisons between the two census years and to assist in reclassifying establishments.

The alphabetical list of products was developed by the Division of Manufactures and the Central Statistical Board's Committee on the Standard Industrial Classification. The last time the Division of Manufactures, Bureau of the Census, compiled such a list was for the census of 1919.

The classification of reports for manufacturing establishments is the assignment of the individual reports to the particular industries in order to bring together, so far as practical, all the establishments engaged in manufacturing the same, similar, or related products.

As a general rule, the industry to which a report will be assigned is determined by the product having the greatest value which is manufactured in the reporting establishment. There are some exceptions to this general rule, such as "wholesale meat packing," "steel works and rolling mills," and certain "printing industries" in which reports are classified on the basis of the process of manufacture rather than the product of chief value.

This list contains approximately 6,400 products. Most of these are "major products," that is, they are manufactured as the product of chief value by an establishment and, therefore, are the basis for assigning the report to the proper industry. In addition, a number of products are listed which are not products of chief value. Some of these latter products will often be reported by manufacturers, while others will rarely be reported. In general, they are products which are difficult to assign to the proper industry.
