UNITED STATES SUMMARY

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE POPULATION

INTRODUCTION

GENERAL

This bulletin summarizes the statistics on the basic characteristics of the population of the United States as returned in the 1940 census. These characteristics include urban-rural residence, sex, age, race, nativity, citizenship, country of birth, school attendance, last year of school completed, employment status, class of worker, major occupation group, and industry group.

State bulletins.—All the characteristics of the population that are presented for the United States in the present summary have also been presented for each State, each city of 100,000 or more, and for each larger metropolitan district, in a series of State bulletins. These State bulletins also gave the more basic characteristics in lesser detail for counties, urban places, incorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500, wards of cities of 50,000 or more, and smaller metropolitan districts.

Related reports—More detailed treatment of these subjects and statistics on other subjects covered by the Sixteenth Decennial Census of Population, taken as of April 1, 1940, will be presented in later publications. Statistics on the economic characteristics of the population, begun in the Second Series, will be continued in the Third Series of Population Bulletins, entitled "The Labor Force—Occupation, Industry, Employment, and Income," which will include additional detail on occupation, industry, and employment status, as well as data on wage or salary income, hours worked during the census week, months worked in 1939, and duration of unemployment. A continuation of the statistics on general characteristics of the population, also begun in the Second Series, will be presented in the Fourth Series of Population Bulletins, entitled "Characteristics by Age." This fourth series will include additional data on age, citizenship, school attendance, and last year of school completed, together with statistics on marital status and relationship to head of household. Statistics on internal migration and families, as well as detailed tabulations of sample data on characteristics of the labor force and of the general population, will be presented in later series of bulletins.

In the First Series of Population Bulletins, entitled "Number of Inhabitants," the total population of each State on April 1, 1940, was given for all of its political subdivisions including counties, incorporated places, and minor civil divisions, and for metropolitan districts and census tracts. The first series of State Bulletins, together with the Summary Bulletin, have been bound together to form volume I of the Sixteenth Census Reports on Population (Population, volume I: Number of Inhabitants, 1940).

In addition to the Population reports that present statistics for individuals, the Bureau of the Census is presenting for the first time a separate group of reports on housing, as part of the Sixteenth Decennial Census of Population. The Housing publications contain statistics relating to the characteristics of households as well as of occupied dwelling units, and include such subjects as the number and size of households, race of head, tenure, and value or rent of dwelling units. These statistics are roughly comparable with the statistics published for private families in the 1930 reports on population.

Geographic areas.—Statistics are presented in this summary for continental United States as a whole, for the three main "regions" of the country (the North, the South, and the West), for the nine groups of States designated "geographic divisions," for States, and for cities of 100,000 or more. (Table 52 presents some basic population statistics for cities of 50,000 to 100,000.) In most of the tables for the United States, figures are shown separately for the urban, rural-nonfarm, and rural-farm areas.

Arrangement of tables.—Following the 12 text tables (tables I to XII), which present summary figures for the United States, the more detailed tables (tables 1 to 75) are arranged on the basis of the areas for which figures are presented. Tables 1 to 20 present the figures for the United States as a whole and for the urban, rural-nonfarm, and rural-farm areas of the United States. Tables 21 to 48 contain the figures for the United States by regions, divisions, and States. In tables 49 to 75 data are presented for cities.

The amount of detail presented in this summary is generally much greater for the United States as a whole than for the regions, divisions, States, and cities. In general, the same detail is presented for cities of 100,000 or more as for regions, divisions, and States. Data from censuses prior to 1930, as far as they are available, have been included only in the presentations for the United States as a whole. The tables for States and cities are published here chiefly to facilitate interarea comparisons.

DEFINITIONS OF TERMS AND EXPLANATIONS

Urban and rural areas.—As noted above, the statistics for the United States as a whole include figures showing the characteristics of the population in urban, rural-nonfarm, and rural-farm areas. There is also one table (table 21) that gives the total population of these areas for each region, division, and State. The considerations involved in determining this classification are indicated below.

In the course of its history, the Census has employed several definitions of urban population. The current definition was adopted in substantially its present form at the time of the 1910 census and was slightly modified in 1920 and again in 1930. The present compilation, which has been extended back to the earliest census for the United States, is made on the basis of the definition of urban population employed in 1930 and 1940.

The urban area is made up for the most part of cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, places of this type constituting about 97 percent of the urban places in the United States. A second type is limited to the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, in which States it is not the practice to incorporate as municipalities places of less than 10,000. This type is made up of towns (townships) in which there is a village or thickly settled area having 2,500 inhabitants or more and comprising, either by itself or when combined with other villages within the same town, more than 50 percent of the total population of the town. This type of urban places comprised, in 1940, 7 towns in New Hampshire, 83 towns in Massachusetts, and 12 towns in Rhode Island. A third type of urban places is made up of townships and other political subdivisions (not incorporated as municipalities, nor containing any areas so incorporated) with a total population of 10,000 or more and a population density of 1,000 or more per square mile. Under the special rule establishing this type, urban classification was given in 1940 to places distributed as follows: 4 towns in Connecticut, 1 town in New York, 12 townships in New Jersey, 11 townships in Pennsylvania, 2 election districts in Maryland, 1 county (which had no minor civil divisions) in Virginia, 1 militia district in Georgia, and 1 township in California.

Previously published figures on the total urban or rural population have been revised to conform with the present definition; but in the tables presenting the detailed characteristics of the urban or rural population for censuses prior to 1930 (tables 5, 6, 9, and 12) it has not been possible to make such revisions.

Farm population—urban and rural—The farm population for 1940, as for 1930, comprises all persons living on farms, without regard to occupation. The farm population figures for 1920 included in addition, those farm laborers and their families living in rural territory outside the limits of any city or otherincorporated place. In making comparisons with 1920, however, it is to be noted that this broader definition is offset to some extent by the fact that the 1920 census was taken in January, when considerable numbers of farm laborers and others usually living on farms were seasonally absent and engaged in other pursuits, whereas the two more recent censuses were taken in April, when by reason of the later season the number of persons on farms was appreciably larger.

Although the rural-farm population represents about 99 percent of the total farm population, there are a few States with a considerable number of persons included in the urban-farm population, that is, the population living on farms located in urban places (see table 1). In New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, where a considerable fraction of the total number of urban places consists of entire towns (townships) classified as urban (type 2, as indicated above), these urban places contain more territory not thickly settled (and therefore available for farming) than the urban places contain in most other States. There are also decided differences among the States with respect to the amount of open country included within the boundaries of cities.

Rural-nonfarm population.—The rural-nonfarm population includes, in general, all persons living outside cities or other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more who do not live on farms. The rural-nonfarm population thus comprises persons living in a wide variety of locations, ranging from isolated nonfarm homes in the open country to small unincorporated areas adjacent to a large city. Furthermore, as between one section of the country and another, this group is much less uniform in its general composition than either the urban or the rural-farm population. In some States the rural-nonfarm population consists mainly of the inhabitants of small manufacturing villages or of unincorporated suburban areas; in other States, it may consist mainly of persons living in mining settlements; and in still other States, especially some agricultural States, it is made up largely of the inhabitants of small trade centers.

Table I summarizes the figures for the United States by urban and rural residence, farm and nonfarm, in 1940.

Sex and race.—Because of the importance of the classification of population by sex, practically all of the data are presented separately for males and females. Moreover, as far as feasible, the data are also presented by race. Three major race classifications are distinguished in the tabulations, namely, white, Negro, and "other races." Persons of Mexican birth or ancestry who were not definitely Indian or of other nonwhite race were returned as white in 1940. Such persons were designated Mexican in 1930 (but not in prior censuses) and were included in the general class of "other races." All statistics classifying the population by race are in accordance with the 1940 definition. In the 1930 publications, the figures for the white population for 1930 excluded Mexicans, but the 1930 data for whites published here have been revised to include Mexicans.

Statistics for the individual races included in the classification "other races" are presented both for the United States as a whole and for regions, divisions, States, and cities of 100,000 or more. The Census of 1860 was the first at which Indians were distinguished from the other races, but no enumeration was made of the Indians in Indian Territory or on Indian reservations until 1890. Prior to that time the enumeration was confined to those found living among the general population of the various States.

Nativity.—In this bulletin the population is divided into two fundamental nativity groups, native and foreign born. In the classification by nativity, a person born in the United States or in any of its territories or possessions is counted as native. Likewise included as native is the small group of persons who, although born in a foreign country or at sea, were American citizens by birth because their parents were American citizens. The native population is not here subdivided according to nativity of parents as was done in previous censuses. Information on this subject, however, based on sample data, will be presented in later publications.

The classification of the white population by nativity is shown for all areas, including cities of 50,000 or more. The nativity distribution of the nonwhite races and of the total population is given for the United States as a whole; the nativity distribution of the total population is also given for regions, divisions, and States, and for cities of 100,000 or more. Negroes and Indians, who constitute all but about 2 percent of the nonwhite population of the United States, are practically all native. The foreign-born white are also presented by country of birth as described below.

Table II summarizes the figures for the United States in 1940 by race and sex and by nativity and sex. Sex ratios for each race and nativity group are also presented.

Age.—The age classification is based on the age of the person at his last birthday before the date of the census, that is, the age of the person in completed years. In the 1940 census tabulations the category "age unknown" has been eliminated. When the age of a person was not reported it was estimated on the basis of other information shown on the Population Schedule, such as marital status, school attendance, employment status, age of other members in the family, etc. Since the age estimates were based on actual age distributions of various population groups, the resulting statistics are consistent with known age data.

In comparing specific age groups in 1940 with those from earlier censuses, allowance should be made for the fact that in the earlier censuses, except that of 1880, persons of unknown age were shown as a separate category. The group "age unknown" for the earlier censuses is always included in the total for all ages, both in the present bulletin and in the reports of previous censuses. The summary totals "14 years and over" and "21 years and over" for earlier censuses presented here also include all persons of "unknown age," since it is likely that most of the persons for whom age was not reported were in age classes above these limits.

In the tables showing the population by age for the United States as a whole, for regions, divisions, and States, and for cities of 100,000 or more, the classification is by 5-year periods up to 75 years. Median ages are also presented in several tables. The median age may be defined as that age which divides the population into two equal groups—one-half being older and one-half younger than the median. Age data are also available in various tables for selected additional class intervals. In connection with the statistics relating to school attendance for the United States as a whole, the following age classes are shown: 5, 6, 7–9, 10–13, 14, 15, 16–17, 18–19, 20, and 21–24. Data relating to the labor force include the age classification "14 and over"; the data relating to citizenship include the classification "21 and over"; and data relating to highest grade of school completed include the classification "25 and over." Finally, the classifications "under 1" and "21 and over" are included in a number of the age tables because of the frequent use made of these data.

Table III summarizes the figures for the United States in 1940 by 5-year age groups and sex. The sex ratio within each age group and median ages for each sex are also presented.

Citizenship.—The classification in regard to citizenship embraces, first, the two major categories, citizen and alien. Citizens are subdivided into native and naturalized; and the aliens are subdivided into those having first papers—that is, having made formal declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States—and those not having first papers. In addition to the citizen and alien categories, there is a third group made up of foreign-born persons for whom no report on citizenship was obtained, designated "citizenship not reported." Since it is likely that most of these persons are aliens, they are often included in summary figures for total aliens. The population 21 years old and over is also given separately by citizenship, in order to show the number of potential voters.

Table IV summarizes the figures for the United States in 1940 by citizenship, nativity, and sex. Data are presented for both the total population and the population of voting age (21 years old and over).

School attendance.—The school attendance tabulation for 1940 is based on the replies to the enumerator's inquiry as to whether the person had attended, or been enrolled in, any regular school or college between March 1 and April 1, 1940. Night schools, extension schools, or vocational schools are not included unless they are a part of the regular school system; and no correspondence schools are included. The corresponding question in the censuses from 1890 to 1930 applied to a somewhat longer period: in 1910, 1920, and 1930 to the period between the preceding September 1 and the census date (April 15 in 1910, January 1 in 1920, and April 1 in 1930), and in 1890 and 1900 to the 12 months preceding the census date. Furthermore, the question was not restricted as to the type of school or college in the earlier censuses.

The shorter period to which the question applied in 1940 undoubtedly accounts for many of the apparent declines during the decade in the proportion attending school at given ages. Further, there were a number of areas in which the rural schools were closed for the entire month of March 1940; and, although the children in these areas were for the most part still enrolled in school, negative answers were generally given to the school attendance question, since the children were not actually in attendance. Moreover, in those urban areas where midyear graduates are important, the midyear graduates would have been returned in 1940 as not attending school—but at earlier censuses they would have been returned as attending.

Table V summarizes the figures for the United States in 1940 for persons 5 to 24 years of age by school attendance, sex, and selected age groups.

Highest grade of school completed.—The 1940 census, for the first time, included a question on the formal educational attainment of each person. The question on the schedule referred to the last full grade that the person had completed in the regular school system—public, private, or parochial school, college, or university. This question replaces the inquiry on illiteracy included in previous censuses, and provides data on educational status, a characteristic which is significant for every population group, especially in combination with other characteristics.

The tabulations on last year of school completed, which are presented here, are restricted to persons 25 years old and over, practically all of whom have completed their formal education. More detailed statistics on education to be presented in later publications will include for younger persons data on last year of school completed, cross-classified with school attendance.

All tables presenting data on education include the median year of school completed. The median year of school completed may be defined as that year which divides the population into two equal groups, one-half having completed more schooling and one-half having completed less schooling than the median. These medians are expressed in terms of a continuous series of numbers representing years completed. For example, the completion of the first year of high school is indicated by 9 and of the last year of college by 16. For the sake of comparability, the first year of high school is uniformly represented by 9, although there are some areas with only 7 years of elementary school.

Table VI summarizes the figures for the United States in 1940 for persons 25 years old and over by years of school completed and by sex. Data on median school years completed are also presented.

Foreign-born white population by country of birth.—The foreign-born white population is classified according to country of birth for the United States as a whole, for regions, divisions, and States, and for cities of 100,000 or more. Only for the United States as a whole, however, are figures presented for censuses prior to 1940. All classifications of the 1940 population according to country of birth are based on the political boundaries of January 1, 1937, and therefore include such countries as Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. The classification of the 1930 population is based on the political boundaries of that year, which were in most respects identical with those of January 1, 1937. (Nevertheless, some persons born in central Europe or the Balkans apparently reported birthplace in terms of national boundaries existing either at the time of their birth or in 1940. This tendency probably accounts for increases in the number of foreign-born whites native to Austria, Hungary, and Turkey, and for greater than expected decreases in the number native to countries created or enlarged just after the first World War.) Although the major changes are indicated in table 15, there is some lack of comparability between the figures for the last two censuses and those for earlier censuses, when boundaries were often different. For the censuses from 1850 to 1900, country of birth is shown for the total foreign-born population; but, beginning in 1910, this item was tabulated for the foreign-born white only. For most purposes, however, the data may be regarded as comparable.

Table VII summarizes the figures for the foreign-born white population of the United States in 1940 by country of birth and sex.

Employment status.—Information obtained on the employment status of all persons 14 years old and over according to activity during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, permitted their classification into two large groups: (a) Persons in the labor force, including those at work, those with a job but temporarily absent from work, those on public emergency work, and those seeking work; and (b) persons not reported as in the labor force, including those engaged in own home housework, those in school, those unable to work, persons in institutions, other persons not in the labor force, and those whose employment status was not reported.

The numbers of persons 14 years old and over in the labor force and not in the labor force, and the distribution of each of these main groups according to specific employment-status categories, are summarized in table VIII for the United States.

The several employment-status categories are briefly described below:

(a) Persons in the labor force:

1. At work. Persons who worked for pay or profit at any time during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, in private work or nonemergency Federal, State, or local government work, or assisted without pay on a family farm or in a family business. The group includes not only persons working for wages or salaries, but also proprietors, farmers, other self-employed persons, and unpaid family workers.

2. With a job. Persons not actually at work and not seeking work during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, but with jobs, businesses, or professional enterprises from which they were temporarily absent because of vacation, illness, industrial dispute, bad weather, or lay-off not exceeding 4 weeks with definite instructions to return to work on a specific date.

3. On public emergency work. Persons who, during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, were at work on, or assigned to, public emergency work projects conducted by the Work Projects Administration (WPA), the National Youth Administration (NYA), the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), or State or local work relief agencies.

4. Seeking work. Persons without work of any sort during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, who were actively seeking work during that week. The group seeking work was subdivided into experienced workers and new workers, the latter being persons who had not previously worked full time for 1 month or more.

(b) Persons not in the labor force:

1. Engaged in own home housework. Persons primarily occupied with their own home housework.

2. In school. Persons enrolled in school.

3. Unable to work. Persons unable to work because of permanent disability, chronic illness, or old age.

4. In institutions. Inmates of penal institutions, hospitals for the mentally diseased or defective, and homes for the aged, infirm, and needy. All inmates of such institutions were considered as not in the labor force.

5. Other and not reported. Persons in this general category include two groups:

a. Persons reported as not in the labor force other than those in the above categories. This group includes retired persons, persons who chose not to work, seasonal workers for whom the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, fell in an off-season and who were not seeking work, and persons who, for any other reason, were not in the labor force.

b. Persons whose employment status during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, was not reported. These are individuals for whom enumerators did not obtain sufficient information to determine definitely their employment status. An examination of the characteristics of these persons indicates that the great majority were youths attending school or wives of household heads—types of persons for whom some enumerators tended to omit work status information because they believed it inapplicable. Had complete information been obtained for these persons, it is believed that the great majority would have been classified as outside the labor force.

In most of the labor force tables, persons in the first two categories of the labor force (those "At work" and those "With a job") have been combined as "Employed (except on public emergency work)." The strict definition of the category "With a job," and the fact that these persons were reported as not seeking work, tended to eliminate from the group all but those who would shortly return to the employment from which they were temporarily absent. Over 97 percent of the total persons classified as employed were at work during the census week.

The two components of the group "Other and not reported" were combined in these initial tabulations in order to make room for other types of data believed to be of more value. Tabulations based upon a 5-percent cross section of the census returns indicate that the two groups were roughly equal in size for the United States as a whole, although there was considerable variation from State to State in the relative importance of the two categories. Final figures on the number of persons for whom employment status was not reported will be published later.

In the interpretation of the data for persons on public emergency work, allowance must be made for the misclassification in the census returns of considerable numbers of public emergency workers. The number of persons reported in the census as on public emergency work in the United States was 2,529,606, whereas the number recorded on the pay rolls of the Federal emergency work agencies at the time of the census was 2,906,196 excluding the NYA Student Work Program and 3,377,978 including that program. The amount of misclassification varied greatly from State to State. Among the factors that were responsible for the misclassification were confusion on the part of enumerators and respondents regarding the classification of certain types of public emergency work, and the reluctance of some persons to report that they were on emergency work.

The most common type of misclassification was the reporting of emergency workers as "at work" rather than as "on public emergency work." Persons on the NYA Student Work Program were frequently returned as in school and not in the labor force. There is also evidence that a considerable number of emergency workers were classified as seeking work. The amount of misclassification was somewhat reduced by careful editing of the schedules, but considerable numbers remain improperly classified, especially in the categories employed, seeking work, and in school.

The total number of unemployed, as usually defined, includes (1) persons seeking work and without any form of public or private employment, and (2) those on public emergency work programs established to provide jobs for the unemployed. Because of the misclassification of public emergency workers, the census total of these two groups understates the amount of unemployment. More satisfactory figures can be obtained by adding to the census figures for persons seeking work, the number of persons on pay rolls of the Federal emergency work agencies at the time of the census. This procedure yields a total of 8 million unemployed persons in the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, if persons on the NYA Student Work Program are excluded, or 8,471,788 unemployed if the persons on that program are regarded as unemployed.

These unemployment figures tend to be understated by the number of persons on State or local emergency work programs (for which adequate statistics could not be obtained), and by the number of unemployed persons among those whose employment status was not reported. They tend to be overstated to the extent that some of the agency pay roll figures apply to a period longer than a single week, and to the extent that workers on Federal emergency work projects were reported as seeking work. Preliminary evidence on the importance of these factors indicates that the net effect upon the total volume of unemployment was comparatively small.

Table IX presents data on the number of persons on the pay rolls of the Federal emergency work agencies in each State at the time of the census and State estimates of unemployment similar to those presented above for the United States.

[1] The total number of public emergency workers, as indicated in official reports of the Federal agencies, includes the following: 2,271,130 persons assigned to WPA financed projects on Mar. 27, 1940; 299,767 persons in CCC Camps during March 1940 (average number during the month); 335,299 persons on the NYA Out-of-School Work Program, and 471,782 persons on the NYA Student Work Program during March 1940 (number of different persons during the month). Two offsetting factors may be noted in connection with the number of public emergency workers presented above. Persons assigned to State and local work relief activities would have been included in the total if satisfactory data had been available. The actual total of such persons was probably between 75,000 and 150,000. The increase in the total unemployed which would result from the inclusion of a specific allowance for State and local programs would be largely offset by the deduction that would have to be made from the official Federal agency figures to make them apply uniformly to the census week. The net effect of such adjustments, if they were feasible, would vary considerably from State to State, however, because of the concentration of State and local work relief activities in a few States.

[2] These figures are the sum of the number of persons seeking work as indicated by the census data, and the number of public emergency workers, as indicated in the official reports of the Federal agencies.

[3] The omission of persons on State and local work relief should be particularly noted in these States, since available evidence indicates that there may have been a considerable number of such persons. It is not believed that the number was large enough in most States to have any significant effect upon the estimated volume of unemployment.

Class of worker.—A classification of employed workers (except public emergency workers), by class of worker, appears in table X for the United States. Although a classification by class of worker has been available from the questions asked in preceding censuses, it has never been published except as a subclassification of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits. It is included in the 1940 census reports because of its value in many types of labor market analyses and in the interpretation of data on the employment status of the labor force. The composition of the categories is described below:

1. Wage and salary workers. Persons who were at work or who had a job during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940, as employees for wages or salaries (in cash or kind). This class includes not only factory operatives, laborers, clerks, etc., who worked for wages, but also persons working for tips or for room and board, salesmen and other employees working for commissions, and salaried business managers, corporation executives, and government officials. In the Third Series Population Bulletins this group will be divided into private and government workers.

2. Employers and own-account workers. Persons operating their own unincorporated business enterprises. This class includes not only the owner-operators of large stores and manufacturing establishments, but also small merchants, independent craftsmen, farmers, professional men, peddlers, and other persons conducting enterprises of their own. It does not include managers paid to operate businesses owned by other persons or by corporations; such workers are classified as wage or salary workers. Enumerators were instructed to classify as employers persons who employed one or more wage or salary workers in their business enterprises, and to return as own-account workers those who employed no helpers. Examination of the returns revealed, however, that many enumerators had failed to distinguish properly between these two groups, and hence the two categories are combined.

3. Unpaid family workers. Persons who assisted without pay on farms or in stores or other enterprises operated by other members of their families. The great majority of unpaid family workers are farm laborers.

Comparison of 1940 data on the labor force with previous data for gainful workers.—The 1940 data on the labor force are not exactly comparable with the census statistics for gainful workers in 1930 and earlier years because of differences in definition. "Gainful workers" were persons reported as having a gainful occupation, that is, an occupation in which they earned money or a money equivalent, or in which they assisted in the production of marketable goods, regardless of whether they were working or seeking work at the time of the census. The labor force is defined in the 1940 census on the basis of activity during the week of March 24 to 30, and includes only persons who were at work, with a job, seeking work, or on public emergency work, in that week. Certain classes of persons, such as retired workers, some inmates of institutions, recently incapacitated workers, and seasonal workers neither working nor seeking work at the time of the census, were frequently included among gainful workers in 1930, but, in general, such persons are not in the 1940 labor force. On the other hand, the 1940 labor force includes persons seeking work without previous work experience (new workers) and persons reported as in the labor force for whom neither occupation nor industry was entered on the schedules. Most of the relatively few new workers at the time of the 1930 and earlier censuses were probably not counted as gainful workers. Likewise, some persons who were actually gainful workers, but for whom neither occupation nor industry was reported, were not included in the gainful worker figures for 1930 and earlier years.

The 1940 labor force figures are restricted to persons 14 years old and over, whereas the number of gainful workers shown in earlier censuses included persons 10 years old and over. The number of workers 10 to 13 years old has become relatively small and no longer justifies the additional burden of enumeration and tabulation necessary to retain the 10-year age limit. In making comparisons between the 1940 labor force data and the gainful worker statistics in earlier census reports, the slight difference in age limits should be taken into consideration. The statistics on gainful workers shown in this bulletin for earlier censuses have been adjusted to exclude those 10 to 13 years old.

Comparative figures for workers in the labor force in 1940 and the number of gainful workers 14 years old and over in 1900, 1910, 1920, and 1930 are presented in table 20 for the United States. Changes in census dates affect the interpretation of these figures. In 1900 the census was taken on June 1, whereas in 1910 it was taken on April 15, and in 1920 on January 1; in both 1930 and 1940 the census date was April 1. These changes may have had a considerable effect, especially in agricultural areas, on the size of the group returned as gainful workers and on their occupational and industrial distribution.

Later tabulations of 1940 census data will make possible a more detailed evaluation of the differences between the 1930 and 1940 definitions. In particular, data on months worked during 1939 will reveal a considerable number of persons not counted in the 1940 labor force (since they were neither working nor seeking work in the census week) who worked one or more weeks during 1939. Many of these probably would have been counted as gainful workers under the 1930 definition. In 1940 many of these persons were properly included among the 3,922,494 persons in the category "Other and not reported," and many were in the categories "Engaged in own home housework" or "In school," which may include persons who enter the labor force only for limited periods of the year, as, for example, during the Christmas or canning seasons or vacations, and who definitely are not in the labor force during the remainder of the year.

Occupation statistics.—The statistics presented here showing workers classified by major occupation groups are limited to "Employed (except on public emergency work)", that is, persons "At work" or "With a job" during the week of March 24 to 30, 1940. Occupation statistics for other persons in the labor force (persons "On public emergency work" and persons "Seeking work") are not presented here, but will be presented for States and cities of 100,000 or more in the Third Series Population Bulletins. The number of persons in each major occupation group by sex is shown in table XI for the United States.

In presenting occupation data for gainful workers in previous censuses, most occupations were grouped into a few large industrial divisions, such as agriculture, manufacturing, etc., and each of these occupations was classified in that industrial division in which the occupation was most commonly pursued. In the presentation of 1940 occupation statistics in this volume, occupations are shown in major occupation groupings without regard to industrial attachment.

The occupation classification used for the 1940 census contains 451 titles. With very few exceptions, these 451 items are convertible to the 327-item Convertibility List of Occupations, which was prepared by a Joint Committee on Occupational Classification (sponsored by the Central Statistical Board and the American Statistical Association) to increase comparability among occupational statistics compiled by various governmental and private agencies. The occupation statistics presented in this volume are in terms of 12 major groupings of the 451 specific occupation titles of the 1940 classification system used by the Bureau of the Census.

The major groups of occupations used here and the major groups of the 327 occupations in the "standard" Convertibility list of Occupations differ somewhat, but are convertible to each other. The specific occupations in each of the 12 major occupation groups are listed on page 11. Occupation statistics for States and large cities will be presented in much greater detail in the Third Series Population Bulletins.

Industry statistics.—The condensed industry statistics presented here, like those for major occupation groups, are shown only for "Employed workers (except on public emergency work.)"

In classifying industry returns for 1940, the Bureau of the Census used a classification system with 132 industry titles. This classification system, which was designed for classifying industry reports from individuals, was prepared by the Joint Committee on Occupational Classification, in cooperation with the Committee on Industrial Classification, composed of representatives of various governmental agencies.

The industry statistics presented in table XII are in terms of a condensed list of 45 industry groups, which represent selections and combinations of titles in the 132-item list. The 45 industries selected for this condensed list are those in which significant numbers of persons are employed in many small areas. The same list of industries is used for all areas for which industry data are presented even though in some areas certain industries included in the list may be relatively unimportant or may not be represented at all. The use of this standard condensed list of industries for all areas will facilitate the comparison of industry statistics among areas. Industry statistics for States and large cities will be presented in greater detail in the Third Series Population Bulletins.

The industry classification "Government (not elsewhere classified)" does not include all persons employed by governmental agencies. Persons were included in this classification only if they were engaged in activities that are peculiarly governmental functions. Government employees who were engaged in activities that are commonly performed by employees of private enterprises are included in the industry classification in which their activities fell. For example, a tax collector is included in the industry classification "Government," but a lineman employed by a municipally owned power plant is classified in the category "Electric light and power." The total number of persons employed by governmental agencies, therefore, cannot be obtained from the industry classification, but will be available from the class of worker data to be presented in the Third Series Population Bulletins.

The industry group "Domestic service" is somewhat more inclusive than the major occupation group "Domestic service workers," which is limited to "Housekeepers, private family," "Laundresses, private family," and "Servants, private family." The industry classification "Domestic service" includes not only these workers but also persons in occupations such as practical nurse, chauffeur, and gardener, if they were employed by private families.

Occupation and industry data for 1940 in comparison with earlier years.—Comparisons between the 1940 data on occupation and industry and similar statistics for earlier years are complicated by two considerations: (1) Both the occupational and industrial classification systems have been substantially revised; and (2) the 1940 data presented here pertain to employed workers only (except those on public emergency work), whereas the data for 1930 pertain to all persons reporting gainful occupations, regardless of their employment status at the time of the census. (Note also differences between the definition of gainful workers in 1930 and that of the labor force in 1940, as discussed on p. 9.) Comparisons between 1940 and earlier years will be facilitated by more detailed data to be made available in later publications.

OCCUPATIONS INCLUDED IN EACH MAJOR OCCUPATION GROUP

("N. e. c." is used as an abbreviation for "not elsewhere classified")

Professional Workers: Artists and art teachers; Authors, editors, and reporters; Chemists, assayers, and metallurgists; Clergymen; College presidents, professors, and instructors; Dentists; Engineers, technical; Lawyers and judges; Musicians and music teachers; Pharmacists; Physicians and surgeons; Teachers (n. e. c.); Trained nurses and student nurses; Actors and actresses; Architects; County agents and farm demonstrators; Librarians; Osteopaths; Social and welfare workers; Veterinarians; Professional workers (n. e. c.).
